EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Boston, July 12, 1890.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee, held July 12, it was voted to employ competent architects to supervise the erection of grand stands. Arthur A.
Fowle and Albert Clarke were added to the Reception Committee.

At the meeting on the 16, W. W.
Waugh and Thos. F. Anderson were added to the Press Committee. $500 was voted to Plymouth Post towards defraying the expenses of the clam-bake,
Major F. G. King, Paul H. Kendrick,
Chas. B. Rohan, and F. C. Brownell were added to the Reception Committee. A vote was passed authorizing the chairman to make a circular appeal to business men to close their places of business
Aug. 12.

At the meeting held July 19 the Committee on Information was given authority to issue a Directory at an expense of $500. Voted to request President Harrison to grant special leave of absence to employees in the various departments who are veterans who desire to attend the Encampment.

At meeting held the 21st it was voted to ask the Secretary of the Navy to add the "Philadelphia," "Essex," Enterprise," torpedo boat "Cushing," and dynamite cruiser "Vesuvius" to join the fleet already ordered rendezvous at Boston during Encampment week.

COMMITTEE ON DECORATIONS.

The Committee on Decorations has decided to placard a number of historic spots with appropriate inscriptions. The places selected and the inscriptions which they will bear are as follows:—

King's Chapel—"Corner-stone laid, 1749."

S. S. Pierce's store, corner of Court and Tremont streets—"Site of Custom House, 1759. Washington lodged here,
1789. Daniel Webster's office."

Southerly corner of Tremont Street and Pemberton Square—"Here lived on this site Gov. Henry Vane, 1635 to 1637.
Samuel Sewall, chief justice of the Colonies, 1689, also John Cotton."

Tremont Street, about midway between Pemberton Square and Beacon Street—"Here lived on this site Gov. Richard Bellingham, 1635. Peter Faneuil, 1737; he gave Faneuil Hall to Boston."
Washington Street, next to Old South Church—"Here lived Gov. John Winthrop."

Province House—"On this site stood the Province House, the residence of the royal governors."

North end, corner of Liberty Square and Kilby Street—"Site of stamp office, destroyed by the mob, 1765."

Court Street, easterly corner of Franklin Avenue—"Benjamin Franklin, a printer's apprentice, 1718."

Southerly corner of State and Washington streets—"Site of Gen. John Knox's bookstore. Capt. Keane, first commander of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Association, lived here."

Northwest corner of Exchange and State streets—"Site of Royal Custom House."

Old State House—"The Old State House, built 1713."

Faneuil Hall—"Faneuil Hall, built
1742, burned 1761, rebuilt 1763."

Hancock Tavern, Corn Court—"Hancock Tavern, 1634. Here were entertained Washington, Franklin, Lord
Leigh, Talleyrand, and Louis Philippe of France."

Union Street, southern corner of Hanover Street—"Benjamin Franklin, candle-maker."

Marshall Street, now Atwood's Oyster House—"Paymaster-General E. Hancock's house, built prior to 1769."

80 to 86 Union Street—"Site of the Green Dragon Tavern, the favorite resort of the Sons of Liberty, 1695."

115 to 121 Salem Street—"Built in 1680."

57 Prince Street—"Built in 1727."

51 and 53 Prince Street—"Built in 1728."

Prince Street, corner of Lafayette Street—"Built prior to 1750. Used as a hospital by the British in 1775."

130 Prince Street—"Built prior to 1728. Major Pitcairn died here, from wounds received at the battle of Bunker Hill."

Liverpool Wharf—"The tea was thrown over from this wharf."

Washington Street, about opposite old
Franklin school—"Fortification Gates."

Washington Street, near Clifton Place —"Line of intrenchments of the Colonial forces."

American House—"Here lived Gen.
Joseph Warren."

Jeffries Wharf—"From this wharf the British embarked for Bunker Hill."

Constitution Wharf—"Here was built the frigate 'Constitution,' 'Old Ironsides.'"

OFFICIAL PROGRAMME AND DIRECTORY.

HEADQUARTERS GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC,
DETROIT, July 19, 1890.

General Orders,
No. 17.

I. The Commander-in-Chief hereby announces that the parade of the Grand Army of the Republic at its Twenty-fourth National Encampment will take place at Boston, on Tuesday, Aug. 12, 1890.

II. The headquarters of the Commander-in-Chief will be established at the Hotel Vendome, on Commonwealth Avenue, at 9 A. M., at which hour all departments will form in their designated positions, and the column will move at 10.30 A. M. over the following route:—

Commonwealth Avenue (south side) to Arlington Street, thence via Boylston Street, Huntington Avenue, Dartmouth Street, Columbus Avenue, West Chester Park and Square (south side), Washington Street, Hanover Street, and dismissed corner Washington and Hanover streets.

III. The formation of the line will be in the park on Commonwealth Avenue, the right resting at the corner of West Chester Park (south side), and extending to Arlington Street. Departments will take position in line, in order of seniority of charter, and form in single rank, platoons of twelve files front, closed en masse. Detailed orders will be issued later from these headquarters giving exact position of each department, which will be designated by flags.

IV. Department Commanders will at once report to these headquarters the approximate number of men who will be present from their respective departments.

V. Department Commanders and staffs will be mounted if possible. Mounted Posts will parade with their own departments, their places of rendezvous to be designated hereafter, but at places where they can "fall in," in their proper places, in the column.

VI. Organizations other than the G. A. R. will follow the G. A. R. in the following order: All associations of naval veterans, regimental and other military associations, camps of Sons of Veterans.

VII. All naval associations will form on Newbury Street, right resting on Arlington Street, and extending south. Regimental and other military associations will form on the left of the naval associations. Sons of Veterans will form on Marlborough Street, right resting on Arlington Street, and extending south.

VIII. Carriages with crippled veterans will form on Beacon Street, in double line near street curb, right resting on Arlington Street, and extending south, and will move into position on the left of the column of the G. A. R.

IX. Each department will parade as a division, under command of its Department Commander. Naval associations will parade as a division under a commander to be designated by the Commander-in-Chief in later orders. Regimental and other military associations will parade as a division under similar orders. Sons of Veterans will form as a division under command of the ranking officer of their order present. Column of crippled veterans in carriages will be in charge of an officer, who will be designated by the Commander-in-Chief in later orders.

X. The Massachusetts Department, being the Entertaining Department, will take position on the left of the column of the Departments of the G. A. R.

By order of

R. A. ALGER,
Commander-in-Chief.

GEO. H. HOPKINS,
Adjutant-General.

MONDAY, AUGUST 11.

This day will be given up to the reception of guests on their arrival at the various railway stations. Visitors already in the city will have opportunity to locate the various headquarters of Departments, Posts, Brigade, and Regimental Associations, etc., given in detail elsewhere in these columns.

GRAND ARMY SALE

STANDARD GOODS.

We believe we cannot better show our appreciation of the veterans of the Grand Army, than by giving them and their families the benefits accruing from the holding of a special sale of seasonable goods in twenty departments of our store during Encampment Week. We shall, therefore, during this week ONLY, offer in each of these twenty departments our regular stock of standard goods, at prices which will make even the poorest of men smile for joy. As we have not space to give anything like a full list of our stock, we simply name a few representative articles in each department, and quote prices on one of them as indicative of the prices at which all will be offered during this GRAND ARMY SALE.

ATHLETIC DEPARTMENT.

Bats and Balls, Lawn Tennis, Croquet, Cotton, Worsted, and Silk Caps and Belts in all patterns. We offer a Cotton-worsted Hammock, 10½ feet long, warranted strong and perfect, for 55 cents during this sale. Regular price, $1.25.

BAG DEPARTMENT.

Bags of every kind and variety. Extensions, Trunk Straps, Chatelaine Bags, with and without belts. A russet leather, straight goat, 10-inch Bag, with Japanese frame, only 55 cents.

PARASOL DEPARTMENT.

Parasols and Umbrellas of every kind, style, and variety at less pocket-book prices. Our special black Gloria Umbrella, with gold cap handle, at 75 cents, is a leader.

TRUNK DEPARTMENT.

A large showing of patterns and qualities, designed for every occasion and all tastes. The Trunk we offer for $2.49 would be considered very cheap, elsewhere, at $3.50.

BABY CARRIAGE DEPARTMENT.

This department is crammed full of representative carriages of special patterns at reasonable prices. Our $6.50 Carriage is conceded to be the best value ever offered. Full line of Velocipedes, Carts, Wagons, Wheelbarrows, and Buckboards. The $4.00 Velocipede, with 25-inch drive and 16-inch rear wheel, at $3.49, is a typical bargain.

GAME AND TOY DEPARTMENT.

Comprises everything in the toy and game line, both novel and instructive. Parcheesi, Boards are always leaders here; our 89-cent pattern is peculiarly valuable. Checker Boards, Cribbage Boards, Dominoes, and all the other popular games at selling prices.

DOLL DEPARTMENT.

Dolls for the million. China, Rubber, Kid, Bisque, Jointed, with and without movable eyes and adjustable limbs. One 16-inch darling with bisque head, jointed body, closing eyes, natural hair, finished hands and feet, with muslin lace-trimmed dress, at 40 cents for this week only. Will delight every girl's heart.

PICTURE DEPARTMENT.

Special offerings of Framed Pictures and Easels in many designs and patterns. Splendid Bamboo Easel, 4½ feet high, of genuine bamboo, finely finished, brass ends and tips, 93 cents. Oxidized Framed Engravings, glass covered, many subjects, 75 cents.

BOOK DEPARTMENT.

We offer a splendid Webster's Dictionary, full sheep, on good paper, pictorial illustrations, 1,642 pages, $1.98. 727 titles in 10-cent paper-covered books, and 200 of our 5-cent paper books; some of all the most popular works of the world's authors. Our 24-cent cloth-bound books unsalable every one. Ask for catalogues of all of them.

GROCERY DEPARTMENT.

The best obtainable groceries of every description are found in this department at selling prices. For instance: Curtis Davis Welcome Soap, 4½ cents per cake; Procter & Gamble's Ivory Soap, 14 cents; Pyle's Pearlina, 11 cents; Kitchen's Sapolio, 5 cents; Royal Baking Powder, 11 cents; Cleveland Baking Powder, 11 cents; Rising Sun Stove Polish, 5 cents; and everything else at as low prices.

GLASSWARE DEPARTMENT.

Comprises Table and Ornamental Glassware of every description. A specially nice present to carry home would be one of our dainty Glass Flower Baskets, in many new styles and latest colors, at 49 cents. Another would be our blown glass, finely hand-engraved Table Tumblers, packed in a box, at 28 cents per dozen.

VASE DEPARTMENT.

387 patterns of Hungarian, Zebra, Ruby, Alabaster, Hand-painted, Banded, and Royal Worcester Vases. A special offering is a pair of 6-inch Coral Vases with beaded gold decoration, at 11 cents a pair.

SILVERWARE DEPARTMENT.

Roger Bros. 1847 Plated Table Ware in full variety of latest design and shades. A combination Table Set of three pieces, comprising Engraved Pepper and Salt and Toothpick Holder, at 40 cents, is a representative bargain in this department.

CROCKERY DEPARTMENT.

Dinner Sets, Tea Sets, Toilet Sets, underglazed in many printings, in Opaline, China, White Granite, and C. O. ware. T. & R. Boote Semi-porcelain 112-piece Dinner Set. New Stanley pattern, a leading set, this week only for $11.88.

LAMP DEPARTMENT.

Parlor, Hanging, Hand, and Bracket Lamps in many choice styles and rare designs. Our special Parlor Lamp has a fancy fount, decorated porcelain vase, artistic base, nobby brass trimmings, tulip shaped, daintily colored globe, and sells for $1.19.

KITCHEN FURNISHING DEPARTMENT. Comprises a full stock of every conceivable kitchen utensil, dish, or regulate in tin, wood, or iron. Many cute labor-saving specialties are among them. Our Child's Toilet Stand, 31 inches high, with towel rack, wash bowl, two-quart pitcher, and soap dish, finely finished in colored enamel paint, costs only $1.74, and fills a long-felt want.

GENTS' FURNISHING DEPARTMENT. Offers every description of Gentlemen's Furnishings. Our specialty, the celebrated Wauken hose (shaped to foot), 15 cents; 2 pair for 25 cents.

HOSIERY AND UNDERWEAR DEPARTMENT. Misses' and Ladies' Jersey Vests for 10 cents. Our 5 cents per pair Hosiery surprises every one.

COTTON CLOTH AND LINEN DEPARTMENT. Fruit of the Loom 4-4 bleached cotton, 3½ cents a yard. Continental Brown, 7 cents per yard. Turkey Red Table Cloth, nobby pattern, 21 cents a yard, are sample bargains in this department.

MUSICAL DEPARTMENT.

Our 5-cent Vocal and Instrumental Music is a steady seller, and we carry over 700 selections in stock. Banjos, Harmonicas and all instruments are found here.

We trust our friends and patrons will thoroughly understand that these prices are for this GRAND ARMY SALE only, and are far below the regular prices for these goods. We cannot afford to continue these special prices after Encampment Week. Please do not, therefore, expect that we shall do so. Mail orders will receive special care, and be filled at these prices during this week only.

RIDGE'S for INFANTS and INVALIDS
FOOD

Abundant proofs are given where Ridge's Food has been adopted when children have been taken from the mother's breast when the infant has been present, and the child has grown up hearty and strong. It is neutral in its action on the bowels, and a perfectly safe diet if used according to the Special Directions around each can; will prove the desideratum for the weakest infant, and is also the only food which will furnish a full meal for a growing child. Send to WOOLRICH & CO.,
Palmer, Mass., for pamphlet free.

HON. WHEELOCK G. VEASEY,
Candidate for Commander-in-Chief.

Judge Veasey, of Vermont, who is so favorably mentioned throughout the country for election to the office of commander-in-chief at the coming encampment, shrinks from newspaper notoriety, lest it might be thought that he is "working the press" for his advancement. As a matter of fact, while not indifferent to the distinguished honor for which his friends present him, he is making no effort for himself. But from his personal friend, Col. Albert Clarke, president of the Vermont Veterans' Association of Boston, the GRAND ARMY RECORD has been able to obtain the photograph from which the above likeness was made, and the following concise sketch of his brilliant and honorable record in military and civil life:—

Wheelock G. Veasey was born in Rockingham County, New Hampshire, about fifty-three years ago, and educated at Phillips Exeter Academy, Dartmouth College, and the Albany Law School. He had just begun practice in Springfield, Vt., when the war broke out. At the close of his military service he resumed practice at Rutland, in partnership with Hon. Redfield Proctor, the present Secretary of War.

HIS MILITARY RECORD.

He enlisted as a private in the Third Vermont Volunteers early in 1861, was chosen captain of Company A, and promoted to be major and lieutenant-colonel that summer. The colonel of the regiment was William F. Smith, who afterwards became popularly known as Gen. "Baldy" Smith. Being a West Point man, he gave his command thorough discipline, and it distinguished itself at Lee's Mills, the first battle of the Peninsular campaign, in 1862. By this time, however, its colonel had been made a general officer, and was in command of a division, and Col. Veasey was his chief of staff, and was engaged in all the battles of the Peninsula campaign. Soon afterwards the latter was chosen colonel of the Sixteenth Vermont Infantry, a new regiment, and he at once repaired to his new command, which for some months was stationed at outposts in the defenses of Washington, where he improved the opportunity to make it one of the best-drilled regiments in the volunteer army. It formed a part of Stannard's Second Vermont Brigade at the battle of Gettysburg, and made the famous assault upon Pickett's right flank, and then faced about and charged four hundred yards, striking Wilcox's division upon its left flank, thus contributing greatly to the repulse of Longstreet's corps on the afternoon of the third day of the battle. During his army life Col. Veasey served on courts-martial and commanded both regiments and brigades by special detail.

RECORD IN CIVIL LIFE.

In addition to a leading law practice, in 1864 he accepted appointment as reporter of the decisions of the Supreme Court of Vermont, and held the office eight years, publishing nine volumes. He was a State senator in 1872-3, and was a leading member of that body. Still continuing practice, he was appointed register in bankruptcy in 1873, which office he held until the law was repealed. In 1879, he was chosen a judge of the Supreme Court of Vermont,—the highest court in the State,—and he held this office for ten years, becoming distinguished for judicial learning and probity, and being called to preside at nisi prius over the most difficult trials in the State. In 1879 he was appointed by the governor a commissioner to report to the legislature upon court expenses with a view to retrenchment and reform. Soon after going upon the bench, he was appointed a commissioner for revising the statutes of the State. In 1889 he was appointed by President Harrison an inter-State commerce commissioner, and this office he holds at the present time. While not a politician, he has always been a Republican, and in 1876 was a delegate at large to the National Convention in Cincinnati. He has been a trustee of Dartmouth College since 1873, and held a similar relation to other institutions. In 1887 Dartmouth conferred upon him the degree of LL.D.

HIS GRAND ARMY RECORD.

Col. Veasey was elected commander of Roberts Post 14, at Rutland, when it was organized, twenty-three years ago. He belongs to it now, and takes pride in it, as the largest and one of the most efficient posts in the department. For three years in succession he was one of the earliest department commanders in Vermont, and under his administration the Order flourished. He was judge-advocate-general when Judge Rea, of Minnesota, was commander-in-chief, in 1887-88, and was instrumental in obtaining for the Grand Army a title to the cottage in which Gen. Grant died, on Mount McGregor. He has attended nearly all the National Encampments, and been a leading member. Last year, at Milwaukee, he was about to be nominated for commander-in-chief, but being present, he declined the use of his name, and seconded the nomination of Gen. Alger, in a speech of such grace and eloquence as won the admiration of every delegate.

In addition to these G. A. R. positions, he has been president of the Vermont Officers' Reunion Society, is president of his old Regimental Association, is a member of the Massachusetts Commandery of the Loyal Legion, and has been orator at a great number of military reunions. He was one of the commissioners to erect monuments to Vermont valor at Gettysburg, and is at present a director of the Gettysburg Battlefield Memorial Association.

CONCLUSION.

Such is the outline of a career of valor, patriotism, and useful service in civil life, which has, in the estimation of his friends, eminently qualified Judge Veasey for any exalted position to which he may be called, and they feel that the Grand Army will honor itself and promote its well-being by now advancing him to the head of its column. Vermont has never held either of the three highest honors of the Encampment, and there is a feeling that the East is this year entitled to signal recognition. The semi-judicial office which Judge Veasey holds will not in the least conflict with his serving as commander-in-chief, but, on the contrary, his duties at the National Capital and in different parts of the country will afford opportunity for more than usual contact with members of the Order.

ACCOMMODATION COMMITTEE.

After August 7th, this committee will provide no more free quarters for comrades visiting the National Encampment, to be held in Boston in August.

The Department of Colorado and Wyoming has seventy-seven posts and 3,288 comrades. The department gained 471 last year in membership.

"I am sorry to see, young man, that you wear an artificial leg." "Yes, sir; it's the result of that big fight at Gettysburg." "How old are you?" "Twenty." "Why, you were not born when the battle was fought." "True; but my father was there. I inherited the leg from him."

Steamers leave north side Central Wharf (foot State Street) week days 9.30 a. m. and 2 p. m. Leave Gloucester at 4 a. m. and 2 p. m. Sundays, leave Boston at 10.15 a. m. Tickets, 50 cents; round trip, 80 cents. Six-trip commutation ticket, $2.40. Special rates to excursion parties. *a. m. trip omitted Mondays.

This Route affords to tourists one of the finest ocean trips along the North Shore, a distance of thirty miles, with Scenery Unsurpassed.

Some of the points of interest along the North Shore to the city of Gloucester are the beautiful islands of Boston Harbor, including Fort Independence and Deer Island, and also a view of all the lighthouses of the bay. Passing out of the harbor, the first sight of interest is the renowned summer resort of Nahant, its shores and beaches lined with cottages and summer residences on the one side, and the broad Atlantic on the other. Next comes the shores of Swampscott and the quaint Old Town of Marblehead; then passing near Halfway Rock, where the crews of the fishing fleets cast their pennies on their outward trips for good luck and safe return.

On Baker's Island are the Twin Lights, so well known to mariners entering Salem and Beverly harbors. Then Manchester-by-the-Sea, one of the most fashionable watering-places of these shores, and one of the many Beautiful Suburban Drives of Gloucester. Then we have Magnolia, noted for its fine and numerous hotels, filled to overflowing with guests during the summer season, with its walks to Rafe's Chaum and Norman's Woe Rock, made famous by Longfellow's poem, "The Wreck of the Hesperus." Entering the harbor gives one a fine view of the City of Gloucester, The Most Renowned Fishing Port of the World, also noted for its drives and beautiful summer resorts for pleasure seekers. The harbor is noted for its beautiful beaches for sea-bathing, as well as for its boating and fishing. Excursionists visiting ANTIQUARIUM, BAY VIEW, LAKEVILLE, RARE ROCK, and EAST GLOUCESTER, ROCKFORT, and PICKON CORV, will find this the pleasantest way of travelling, avoiding heat and dust.

CAMPS AND BATTLEFIELDS REVISED.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "HARD TACK AND COFFEE."

XVII.

En Route to Rappahannock Station. George T. Crump, Co. for Brandy Station. The Cavalry Fight, Brandy Station to-day. The Artillery Brigade, Third Corps. Its Camp, John Minor Botts, Gen. Meade's Headquarters. His Cabin Still standing.

The readers of the RECORD who have had the patience to follow my narrative thus far will remember that in my last letter published in the June RECORD I was on the point of leaving Kelly's Ford and setting out for Rappahannock Station. The distance is but four or five miles. The journey was up river, along the north bank of which we joggled along over a horrible road which grew better as we neared our journey's end. Here and there appeared some reminder of war time. At one point we passed a guide-board bearing this inscription: "Beaeton 4 miles." Beaeton was, on one or two different occasions, a base of supplies for the army. "It has built up right smart the last four or five years," was Mrs. Wrenn's remark in answer to some inquiry I made regarding it.

About eleven o'clock Rappahannock Station hove in sight. It was not my fortune to have seen this spot in war time, so I am unable to make comparisons. It is now however a neat and thriving little village, getting its living, as do most of the little settlements along the railroad, by "merchandising," that is, selling dry and wet goods to the country farmers, white and black, who come in and buy or barter their farm products for such commodities as they need.

On our arrival at the station, Mr. Wrenn, who has kindly brought me hither, hunts up, before taking his leave of me, an ex-Johnny to act as my guide while I remain, in the person of George T. Crump, a former member of the Third Virginia Cavalry. George is a very genial man, rather talkative, and is with you heart and soul. He claims to have been the original Republican of the vicinity, and is an enthusiastic Mahone man. He says he was on picket here when the advance of the Army of the Potomac appeared in November, 1863. Gen. Lee's headquarters were then at Brandy Station, five miles farther up the railroad, and George says that he was the first to report our advance to the General, riding in hot haste to do so.

Acting on George's suggestion, I seek and find quarters at the house of a Mr. Allison, a very affable gentleman, and one of the prominent "merchandisers" of the settlement. The dinner of roast rabbit recalled vividly to mind the rabbit-hunting done by portions of the army through this section in that same fall campaign of '63, when a score or two of soldiers would sweep through a small tract of sprouts which had grown up where the army had cut off the woods a year before, and start out and capture some of the "cotton-tails," which were abundant here at that time. It was fun for the men, but sure death to the rabbits, which, beset on all sides by howling men and flying clubs, would surrender unconditionally.

Dinner over, I engage an open wagon, and with George as guide and driver, I set out for Brandy Station. The way is devious. We ford the river below the railroad bridge, then passing inside the railroad fence, travel alongside of the track some distance, where we leave it again, and wind about in old army fashion, in adjacent fields, till, as we near the station, we come on to one of those red clay roads, hard, cracked, and glossy, which so delighted artillerymen in the service. "Under that large tree," said George, pointing to a wide-spreading oak which stands near where the road forks, the other branch running back to Kelly's Ford, "I saw seven of our men lying dead after the cavalry fight we had here.

You see, you drove us all back here with a rush from Kelly's Ford, and gave us a pretty hard one. Do you know how we forced you back? No? Well, I rode up to Brandy and got an engine there, and got the engineer to drive up and down the track, and you all thought we were getting reinforcements, and fell back." Perhaps some cavalryman will give the RECORD some account of this fight of 1863, which began at Kelly's Ford, and ended near Brandy Station.

It is a little over twenty-six years since I first set eyes on this place of unsavory name. Mr. Kelly told me I would not recognize the place now, and so it proved. Virginia land is either a red clay or a white clay. The former is the strongest and warmest and best farming land. The soil about Brandy Station, being of this variety, has been sold since the war, cleared, and divided up into many small farms. My main quest on this trip is to locate the camp of the old Artillery Brigade Third Corps, which, under the command of the gallant soldier and polished gentleman, Capt. Randolph, the erstwhile commander of brave old Battery E, First Rhode Island Light Artillery, was quartered for the winter of 1863-64 along a little ridge north of the railroad. The brigade was parked in the following order: on the right, Battery E, above mentioned, Robinson's Fourth Maine, Roder's regular Battery K, Fourth United States, Sleeper's Tenth Massachusetts, and Clark's Battery B, First New Jersey Regiment. Back of the ridge, in our rear, was the headquarters of Gen. M. R. Patrick, provost marshal of the army.

On a hill to the front of the brigade stood, perhaps two thousand yards or so distant, a tall two-storied house of freestone color, with flat roof, and having a few straggling trees standing near it. I make inquiries, and finally discover it. It is now painted white, and a cupola surmounts it. Taking this as a guide, I endeavor to locate our old camp, but do not succeed to my complete satisfaction. I miss the pines which crowned our ridge, and the little knoll occupied by Capt. Randolph's headquarters. The farmers have splendid wheat fields where the camps once whitened the landscape, and the clearing away of all trees and the running of fences have so altered the picture of 1864, as I last saw it that I reluctantly leave what I am sure was the immediate neighborhood of our old camp, without the full assurance of having again trodden hallowed ground.

I drive over to Brandy Station itself. Here there is quite a collection of buildings, but not as many as at Rappahannock; cause: its nearness to Culpepper, which, being a large centre, interferes with Brandy as a rallying point for merchandisers. It has seen better days as a base of supplies than it is seeing to-day, and has done more business as such, in all probability, than it will do in the same time again, perhaps for centuries. Certainly it is to be hoped so, if it must be under the same circumstances. I inquire, as usual, if there are any ex-Johnnies living in the village, and find a stout Irish cavalryman who was a member of Cobb's Legion of Georgia, who took a lively part in the campaigns in this vicinity. I have quite an interesting chat with him. Driving on past the station, I come at last in sight of John Minor Botts's old place, which has changed hands, and is now in litigation. Brave old Virginian! who dared to be a Union man and publicly and persistently avow his sentiments, for which he was taken to Richmond and shut up for a time in Castle Thunder. He had been released, and was at home when our army wintered here. In the early winter, the Third Corps, Gen. French then commanding, was reviewed on his farm, and many men in my company recall with pleasure the conversation had with him at that time. His loyalty was a fast color. It never wavered, and even the enemy felt compelled to respect him. As evening was approaching, I did not drive down to the house, much as I desired to, but felt constrained to take my way back to Rappahannock. I cut two or three sticks of the black gum en route on the ground where the cavalry had tussled.

On arriving at Mr. Allison's, I found there a caller from Beverly Ford, Mrs. Joseph Jennings, the mother of Mrs. Allison. At the house of Mrs. Jennings, Gen. William L. Tilton, formerly colonel of the Twenty-second Massachusetts Infantry, had his headquarters at one time. She spoke very highly of him, and called by name several of his officers, whom she remembered pleasantly. Comrade John L. Parker, of Lynn, has recently contributed an article in reference to this camp of his old regiment to the RECORD.

After a good night's rest, I breakfast and make arrangements to revisit Brandy, and ere long am under way. I make another vain endeavor to solve the question of the exact location of our old camp, then turn and drive to Gen. Meade's headquarters. It may not be generally known or remembered that they stood well back to the rear, on high ground, near a heavy growth of pines. Some of these pines are still standing. I was informed that his headquarters cabin was still in existence. It seemed scarcely credible, but at all events I resolved to settle the question for myself, and, after driving through several fields, we came, sure enough, upon an old army log hut, with muddled chimneys, to which I instinctively doffed my hat. A negro family had just moved out, and we walked in. It is divided into two apartments, a door connecting them. There is a door at each end, and one window in each room. And this is army headquarters! What a place for reminiscence! I picked up two old army curb bits just outside the door, also a broken bayonet. Near by is another hut, which has been used as a cow-house. This, local tradition, based on statements of visiting veterans, assigns as the hut occupied by Gen. Rufus Ingalls, once quartermaster-general of the army. Walking still farther, I come upon a whole rank of chimney heaps, where the old army chimneys of brick and stone went to pieces when the Virginia mud which bound them lost its tenacity, and there they lay, nearly grass covered. Would that one of the general's staff officers were here to tell what bright particular military star toasted his shins at the fires which once burned brightly in each, as the occupant dreamed of home and glory, or hob-a-nobbed over his commissary with a kindred spirit, or lost his last ten-cent scrip playing—But never mind: no staff officer is here, and imagination, unaided, except by memory, supplies all the touches needed for the completion of the picture. If I were a Philadelphian, proud as I believe all Philadelphians justly are of the gallant and courtly Meade, I would have that cabin removed to Fairmount Park, where it should be suitably preserved. Cutting two little walnuts near the cabin, as straight as the general himself, I set out for the station.

Chaplain L. N. Beandry, of Worcester, Mass., delivered his thrilling lecture, "Memories of Libby Prison," before a large and appreciative audience at Grove Hall Church, Roxbury, a short time since. The erect soldierly figure, the strong graphic descriptions of the sufferings of the noble heroes of our country, the mirthful side most humorously presented, commanded the attention and deep interest of all.

The lecturer possesses great power in most vividly bringing before one's mental vision the scenes enacted in Libby Prison during his confinement.

COMRADES OF THE GRAND ARMY.

The city of Boston bids you, each and all, a thousand times, WELCOME, and WELCOME, and ever WELCOME.

It recognizes and appreciates the honor bestowed and the confidence manifested in the selection of its city for your twenty-fifth Annual National Encampment.

Conspicuously among the cities of the country, Boston, in all its history, has found both its pleasure and its duty in its mindfulness of and its fellowship with the American Soldier. It has born him, and bred him; and, from the "shot heard round the world" to Appomattox it has had for him the great affection and gratitude to which he has so sure and enduring a title.

It keenly keeps in mind that twenty-nine years ago this whole nation was in column,—the one part to save a free government, the other to utterly destroy it. It realizes the irreparable ruin and devastation to our own, and the hopeless discouragement to all other peoples of the world, if there had come defeat to our arms; and that no statement can be made of the inheritance that has so immeasurably blessed our country, and assured its future greatness and glory, because of the victory of Union and Liberty over Treason and Fratricide.

It believes that that victory has advanced the country a whole century in the march of civilization,—that there was a nation saved and a race emancipated,—that, imperilled through four long wearisome years of contest, the end which made our heartstrings thrill,—the end which meant the maintenance of the nation's honor, the preservation of her liberties, and the upholding of her banner of freedom—was to be attained only by the prowess and stern resolve of the Soldiers and Sailors of the Republic.

Boston believed as did you: that there was never nobler cause, that there was never higher motive inspiring men to war, and that there was to be ultimate triumph. It realizes that between the country and its ruin there stood two and a half millions of yourselves and your crowned dead; that upon field and sea, from the fall of Ladd and Whitney in the streets of Baltimore, to the 9th of April, 1865, there was never doubt or faltering of yours; but that for all those years, through leaden storms, and over glory's shining track, you kept step with that grand majestic throng to look out upon our land, to-day, in a perfect peace and content—its banner of beauty and glory bearing its forty-three stars, and floating from every fortress of the nation, with its roster of sixty-seven millions of Freemen.

Boston understands that you are here in no spirit of boasting or self-glorification, but that you come each year together with the memories of the camp and the field to revive the hallowed associations of the war, and to be joyous with the fruits of a victory, no more or less to ourselves than to our once brave foes, and now our brave friends and countrymen.

Be welcome, comrades, heartily welcome; and may this visit be to you all a most delightful occasion,—a pleasure royal in kind and quantity! May it put into memory's casket its dearest gem, and be a benediction of love all your lives through!

THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE.

We notice that some papers ostensibly favorable to a liberal policy toward the veterans are magnifying beyond its deserts the recent attitude of the New York Tribune in which it declares, in substance, that the great body of the people will not stand tamely by and see so large a percentage of the citizens receiving money from the public treasury and hence the limit of pensions and pensioning now reached must not be overpassed. In the light of the actual condition of the treasury, in the light of the loyal past of that great paper, in the light of history, or having a full knowledge of the intelligence and patriotism of the average American citizen, it is difficult to understand how the Tribune can arrive at such an unjust and absurd conclusion. Does the Tribune remember that the great body of the people a quarter century and more ago saw a much larger percentage of the citizens—even their own kinsmen—pouring out blood like rain and yielding their lives by thousands, while the national debt was piling up at the rate of more than three millions of dollars a day, without any such uprising as it now foresees if justice is meted out to the veterans? Out upon such weak-spined patriotism! We have yet to be shown that the heart of this great nation is less loyal to-day than it was thirty years ago.

There was a time when the columns of the Tribune were dominated by a spirit of truth and right fearlessly and persistently declared. Demagogism in great papers is a serious danger to the body politic, by misleading the people who are in quest of information. Any paper which assumes the responsibility of putting the veterans in the attitude of treasury robbers and self-seekers not only is defaming their dearly bought reputations as patriots but is serving notice on future defenders of the Union as to what their status is to be after the country has made use of them. It may be honestly open to question whether the treasury could stand the draft which a universal service pension would impose, but we repudiate as an insult to their intelligence and patriotism the statement that it would meet with serious opposition from any great body of the American people, the Tribune to the contrary notwithstanding.

IT IS LIKE HIM.

One of the most generous acts among the many which have been done by Boston business men in connection with the Encampment is that of the well-known jeweller, George H. Richards, who has had prepared, regardless of expense, a souvenir volume, five thousand of which are to be given to the Executive Committee for distribution to delegates, the remainder to be sold on the streets at twenty-five cents each. The volume contains sketches of the Grand Army, the Woman's Relief Corps, etc., with finely illustrated articles on historic Boston, and pencil sketches by Charles W. Reed, well and widely known as the artist of "Hard Tack and Coffee." Mr. Richards has expended thousands of dollars on this testimonial, and everybody will want one of these elegant souvenirs to take home.

One matter the Committee of Arrangements could not assure in advance, and that was a pleasant week of weather. Old Prob, although a Massachusetts man and a veteran, would give no guarantee on this point. This being so, the Committee on Accommodations, bearing in mind the modern deluge which flooded St. Louis during the Encampment three years ago, decided not to establish a camp. Other reasons also operated to produce this decision. If now, St. Louis weather shall supervene, everybody will be grateful to the committee for its tender consideration of the veterans, but if a streak of Chicago weather strikes the Hub and sends the mercury to sizzling in the upper nineties and above, some choleric veterans will relegate Chairman Hume and his well-intentioned committee to the fervid heats of a clime not even so cool as Chicago.

Remember, veterans, that the RECORD will stand after you have left us. Leave a dollar and have it sent you for a year.

A TRUE PATRIOT.

Funny, isn't it? But it takes all kinds of people to make a world. Bishop Potter represents one class—it is hoped and believed a very small one. His lugubrious tones are in striking contrast with the hopeful and cheering utterances expressed in his recent Fourth of July oration in Boston, by the young patriot and statesman, Hon. A. E. Pillsbury, as the following extract eloquently testifies. God bless him and all like him!—

A splendid example of patriotism and public duty is soon to be brought home to us. We are about to welcome to our hospitality the veteran soldiers of the war for the Union. We are accustomed in these times to hesitate at the inconvenience involved in the discharge of the commonest public duties, in peace and safety, within sight of our own homes. Here are a hundred thousand men who sealed their devotion to their country with willingness to die in her defence. They went at no call save that of her peril; they returned with no decoration save that of honorable scars, and the thanks of a grateful people. Their presence will be eloquent with the lesson which they taught their countrymen with bared breasts on the field of battle. We are told that we must forget the war. We do not recall it with any ungenerous or vindictive spirit, but patriotism is still a virtue, and loyalty our country is not to be overlooked or forgotten. It is easy to be the security of peace, to make light of the deeds and the sacrifices of the men who fought for the Union. "He jests at scars that never felt a wound." Direct the voice of reproach, if you will, against any who would make them the sport and subject of ambition, but the citizen soldiers of the Republic are no "praetorian guard" and no band of mercenaries. There was a time when they were not held in light esteem. There are many here who remember the days when they looked at each other with bared faces at the news of the last defeat, and turned to the defenders of the country in the field as their only hope and succor. The debt of patriotism and gratitude is not outlawed, and the good city of Boston will hang out all her banners, and put on all her holiday attire to greet and welcome the Grand Army of the Republic.

CHOOSE YE.

Occasionally the veterans are besought by some valiant editor, who sacrificed his wife's relations in the war, not to besmirch their patriotism by asking for a pension, as it would thus appear to the world that our great uprising was for the "old flag and an appropriation." Well now, tell us, in all sincerity, which is the more creditable as a national spectacle: a soldiery receiving some slight recognition from the government it saved, to make its old age more cheerful and comfortable, or one, like the scattered remnants of the Light Brigade, wasting away a wretched existence, neglected and unappreciated by a government to which it added dominion and renown?

FIGHTING FOR IT.

Here is a good-natured scramble for a cake of Pears' Soap, which only illustrates how necessary it becomes to all people who have once tried it and discovered its merits. Some who ask for it have to fight for it in a more serious way, and that, too, in drug stores where all sorts of inferior soaps, represented to be "just as good," are urged upon them as substitutes. But they can always get the genuine Pears' Soap, if they will be as persistent as are these urchins.

SEE THE SIGHTS.

In our Official Programme Guide and Directory our visitors will find outlined enough to take up their time for a full week at least. The old landmarks of Boston, Cambridge, and vicinity cannot be duplicated in any other part of the country. For ten cents the round trip, a ride can be taken by horse or electric cars, which radiate in every direction into our beautiful suburbs. The Harbor and North Shore excursions are delightful, and the excursions to Lexington, Concord, Plymouth, Oakland Beach, and a score of other places cannot well be omitted from the programme of one who intends to see all the attractions of this part of Yankeeedom.

The corrected list of candidates for Senior Vice-Commander-in-Chief to date stands as follows: Past Department Commander John G. B. Adams; Department Commander George H. Innis; Commander Harrison Hume, and Col. Benjamin S. Lovell; four mighty good fellows. But only one can get there, sad to tell.

We doubt whether the proposition coming from Kansas to establish a retired list in Posts will meet with favor in the Encampment. The object sought is practically covered now.

The desire to have the old ritual restored still persists in some departments. The old was really much the more pleasing, but the boys are dropping off pretty fast. Don't keep them changing. Stick to something, and as the new is simpler, stick to that.

Although the influences of the National Encampment are somewhat overshadowing to other veteran bodies, they will not entirely submerge the annual meeting of the New Hampshire Veterans at the Weirs, the last week in August, which will come off as usual. All visiting veterans are invited to remain over and attend this jolly gathering. They will be heartily welcomed.

Any New England veteran visiting Boston is invited to call at 31 Cornhill and make a permanent paying investment of one dollar.

In a communication from New Hampshire, found in another column, "Canteen" relates an interview had with Hannah Dustin. Her vigorous defence of the veterans conveys the idea that to date there is nothing the matter with Hannah. She is still taking scalps.

Who hasn't seen the bean pot which Massachusetts veterans have worn to the recent National Encampments? E. B. Stillings & Co. are the proprietors, and will have them on sale during Encampment week.

While it would be invidious to particularize where so many of the veterans have contributed early and late to secure the success of the Encampment, concurrent opinion will no doubt assign first place to the Chairman of the Executive Committee, Past Department Commander George L. Goodale, as having exerted himself to the utmost to make the gathering a grand success. Even when called from town by business, all reports of committee meetings were forwarded to him, to enable him to keep track of everything that was doing.

Smedbery or Venzey, it matters little so long as he subscribes for this paper and pays in advance.

It will be the most notable event of the Encampment. Music by Marshall's Military Band and the Modoc Club.

MASSACHUSETTS ASSOCIATION UNION EX-PRISONERS OF WAR.

By vote of the Association, the annual reunion is to be held Thursday, Aug. 14, at 3 P. M., in the Green Room of the State House.

In view of the numerous other reunions, the committee have deemed it unwise to attempt an annual dinner, but that each comrade may have something by which to remember the grand assemblage of war veterans, a souvenir badge will be prepared, and presented to each member of our Association in good standing. The necessary expense will therefore be limited to the annual dues of fifty cents.

Headquarters of both the National and Massachusetts Associations will be in the basement of No. 13 Beacon Street, where comrades can meet, and recall the scenes of quarter of a century ago.

The meeting of the National Association will be held in the House of Representatives, on Wednesday and Thursday, Aug. 13 and 14.

The Secretary and Treasurer of the National Association will be present from Monday till Friday of that week, and from him badges can be obtained at $1.00. State pins at 30 cts, and prison bars at 20 cts, each.

O. W. DEMICK, President,
C. G. DAVIS, Sec'y and Treas.,

THE WHITE FLEET.

At the request of the Executive Committee, forwarded to Secretary of the Navy Tracy, the North Atlantic squadron will rendezvous in Boston harbor during Encampment week. The vessels constituting this squadron will probably consist of the "Baltimore" (which is the flag-ship of the squadron), the "Dolphin," "Kearsarge," "Galena," "Essex," and the "Petrel." In addition to these, the committee have asked that the torpedo boat "Cushing," the dynamite cruiser "Vesuvius," and several other war vessels be also ordered to report here at that time. It would be a very pleasing and graceful act on the part of Admiral Gherardi if, on the day set apart to give the delegates an excursion in the Bay, he should drop down the harbor and manoeuvre his squadron in its various evolutions for which it is drilled for the entertainment of the guests on board of the steamer "New York." If suggested to him, no doubt he would willingly do so.

A Young Lady Writes.

This is young Mr. Dolt.
Who took a stroll one day:
He wandered through the meadow
Where the buttercups were gay.

2
And this was what he found that day:
He punched it with his cane:
The cane was half a mile too short,
Which Dolt can now explain.

"If you want to save my life, send me some of that never failing remedy, Johnson's Anodyne Liniment, to 1, S. Johnson, the proprietor from Chicago, Illinois, to a young lady from Mass. Johnson's Anodyne Liniment will stop the inflammation, soothe the burning pain, and counteract the poison of all kinds of insect bites quicker than any remedy on earth. A year's cure for one." To it once.

After trying all in vain,
Of remedies a score;
This is the one he tried at last,
And should have got before.

It proved an angel in disguise,
So thought poor Dolt; for sure
It soothed the pain, so terrible,
He hardly could endure.

For Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Nervous Headache, Diphtheria, Coughs, Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, Cholera-Morbus, Diarrhoea, Lumbago, Soreness in Body or Limbs, Stiff Joints or Strains, will find in this old Anodyne relief and speedy cure. Athletes, ball players, etc., all use it. Johnson's Anodyne Liniment, as directed, for lame back, aching rheumatism, stiff joints, and strains. For cramps, colds or congestions of the throat, Liniment, dropped or applied to the throat, will relieve, and cure all. All $1.00 per bottle, write us.

And this is Mr. Dolt again,
Distorted, sick and sore;
He's not as handsome as of old,
But knows a great sight more.

5
Again, he trips across the field,
So smiling, blithe, and gay
To think, but for that Liniment,
A doctor's bill to pay.

"Should Auld Acquaintance be Forgotten?"

Originated by an old Family Physician in 1800. Years, and still leads. Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. It is as much for Internal as for External use. It is Soothing, Healing and Penetrating. Once used always called for and dealers say "Can't sell any other."

THE REASON WHY is because it cures when all other remedies fail. It was devised and used for years in the private practice of old Dr. Johnson, to treat inflammations liable to afflict any person on earth; and which cause the danger in all the above troubles. The medical advice around each bottle is worth ten times the price. It is marvelous how many different complaints it will relieve or cure. Advice How to Use Economically, sent free. All who buy direct from us, and request it, shall receive a certificate that the money will be refunded if not abundantly satisfied. IF YOU CAN'T GET IT SEND TO US. Price per bottle, $1.00. Express prepaid to any part of the United States. Duty also paid to Canada. Sold by all dealers in medicines.

Every Traveler should have a bottle in his satchel. Should have Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. Sore Throat, Tonsillitis, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains and Pains liable to occur in any family without notice. Delays may cost a life. Relieves all Summer Complaints like magic. Dropped on sugar children love to take it.

I. S. JOHNSON & CO., 22 Custom House St., Boston, Mass.

GENERAL CATALOGUE OF 100 PAGES WILL BE MAILED UPON RECEIPT OF SIX CENTS IN STAMPS.

BOSTON, July 25, 1890.
All former members of the 29th Massachusetts Volunteers who may be in Boston during Encampment week are requested to register on a book for that purpose at the office of Col. Thomas Wm. Clarke, 32 Pemberton Square, Boston, that comrades may know of each other's presence; also to add to the roster of the Regimental Association.

S. C. WRIGHT,
Sec. 29th Mass. Regt. Assn.
The members of the 8th Vermont Vols. will meet at 9 A. M., Aug. 13, at 31 Milk St., Room 4.

Stannard Post No. 2, of Burlington, Vt., will turn out a large number for Boston. The committee of arrangements are Comrades I. B. Sculley, I. H. Holton, E. N. Peck, Andrew McGaffey, and C. W. Ellis. The Sherman Military Band will accompany this Post. The roster of this Post contains the names of many distinguished soldiers.

A committee, consisting of Adj.-Gen. Dalton, representing the State, Past Department Commander Tobin, city of Boston. Chairman Goodale and E. W. Hall, Executive Committee National Encampment, and Department Commander Inals, Department Massachusetts, were in Washington, Tuesday, July 29, for the purpose of making arrangements with President Harrison and cabinet officers for their attendance at the Encampment.

Under escort of Gen. Cogswell they visited the White House and had a very pleasant interview with the President, who will arrive in Boston, either Monday afternoon, Aug. 11, or early on the morning of the 12th. He will remain but one day, leaving Wednesday morning. He will be accompanied by Secretaries Proctor, Tracy, Rusk, and Noble, and possibly Secretary Wannamaker.

Vice-President Morton will also be a guest, and will probably come from Bar Harbor with Gen. Sherman, arriving early on the morning of Aug. 12.

Chairman Goodale and Comrade Hall had an exceedingly pleasant interview with Assistant Secretary of the Navy Soley, who manifested a deep interest in Encampment affairs and a hearty desire to co-operate in all ways with the Executive Committee in carrying out all matters pertaining to the visit of the naval squadron on as grand a scale as possible.

It is most probable that the torpedo boat "Cushing" and dynamite boat "Vesuvius" will be ordered to join the fleet in our harbor, and in all probability two other war vessels will also be ordered here, making the most imposing display of naval vessels ever gathered in Boston harbor.

The committee express themselves as much pleased with their reception by the different officials at Washington, and return home gratified with the success that attended their trip.

At the meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Encampment, held Saturday afternoon, the 26th, a vast amount of routine work was transacted. It was decided to send a committee of five to Washington to urge upon the President and members of the cabinet the desirability of their presence in this city during the session of the Grand Army. One member of the committee will represent the State, one the Mayor of Boston, two the Executive Committee of the National Encampment, and one the Department Commander of the Massachusetts G. A. R. The committee voted to appropriate the sum of $300 for the use of the Boston aids of Gen. Alger, to be used in entertaining the visiting aids of the staff.

The twenty-second annual summer reunion and basket picnic of the First Mass-Heavy Artillery Association will be held at Salem Willows, Salem, Mass., Friday, Aug. 15, 1890. Music for dancing, Tiney O. Upton's orchestra, of Salem; assessments, fifty cents; business meeting at 11 A. M. A first-class fish dinner can be procured on the grounds at fifty cents per plate. On account of the immense travel on the B. & M. Road Encampment week they decline to make any reduction in fares from the regular rates.

The third annual reunion of Co. K 6th Mass. Regt. Inf. will be held at the Langwoods, Wyoming, Mass., Saturday, Aug. 30, 1890, the home of Comrade Geo. F. Butterfield. Let every comrade respond. Take cars at Boston & Main depot, also in Lowell at the same.

In rendering a certain presto, recently, it is said to have played 388 notes in four minutes, each note involving a movement of the finger and one each of the elbow, wrist and arm. Seventy voluntary movements per second were made. This is quick action, but the action of the S. O. Taylor Old Bourbon and G. O. Taylor Pure Rye Whiskies is also quick in relieving tickles. They are of a better age, recommended by physicians, and suggest to us the old motto: "It is quick to relieve."

RECOLLECTIONS OF A PRIVATE.

Among the contributions which appeared in the "Century Magazine" when it first began the publication of its war articles were some sketches under the above caption written by Mr. Warren Lee Goss. These the author has used in connection with a new volume on the war, now in press, some advance sheets of which have been sent us by T. Y. Crowell & Co., his publishers. It is a very readable book. The writer has not only used his own observations, but has availed himself of the recollections of many reliable veterans of varied war experience; and in these he has woven much of the interesting and valuable detail of army life, which is so conspicuously absent in most war books. The book is to be sold by subscription (see publishers' ad., page 14). A more extended notice will be given when it is out. Here is the testimony of Corp. Tanner on the "Recollections" as published in the "Century":—

"Messrs. THOMAS Y. CROWELL & Co., Publishers, etc.:

"GENTLEMEN,—It was my privilege to peruse the 'Recollections of a Private,' by Warren Lee Goss, as published in the 'Century Magazine.' I do not think I can use any language too strong in urging those who take the slightest interest in the greatest struggle of the century to embrace the opportunity that you afford them to peruse these recollections as elaborated in the volume published by you.

"Every veteran who sees it will at once become its enthusiastic indorsement. It covers the field of the Army of the Potomac with a thoroughness, impartiality, and interest which certainly has not been excelled, and I seriously doubt if it has been equalled in all the literature of the war. I beg to be regarded as indorsing it in the most unqualified manner.

"(Signed) JAMES TANNER."

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

ROCHESTER.—Corps No. 41 cleared fifteen dollars at the very enjoyable lawn party at Mrs. Emily Kimball's, July 2.

EXETER.—July 10, Corps No. 36 gave a lawn party, the object of which was to raise money to furnish a room in the Soldiers' Home at Tilton.

STRAFFORD.—Corps No. 40 presented Lynan Locke Post with a flag, July 2. This corps is small in numbers but is much valued by the Post, to which it is auxiliary.

BRISTOL.—Corps No. 22 lately gave an ice-cream and literary festival, which in both respects was first class and fully appreciated by those present.

West Bridgewater will have Post 202, and Bourne, Post 203. Department Commander Inals is to be congratulated on these two healthy additions to his family.

Collector Beard of Boston has again shown his appreciation of the old veteran in raising Major John H. Cook from a clerkship to be auditor in the Custom House. The Major is a member of E. W. Kinsey Post 113, Boston, and has a record for gallant service which fairly entitles him to this recognition. He enlisted as a private in the 10th Mass. Infantry, and was commissioned into the 57th Veteran Regiment from this State, rising to the rank of brevet-major. He was severely wounded before Petersburg, being shot through the intestines, and his surgeon has left it on record that the Major's was the only case within his knowledge where fecal matter and urine both passed from the wound and yet the patient recovered. Major John is worth piles of dead men yet, and is receiving warm congratulations on his appointment.

Was recently brought up by a sand pump near Boise City, Ia., from a depth of 30 feet, it is claimed by Prof. Wright, of Oberlin College, to be the oldest mark of human life on record. The G. O. Taylor Old Bourbon and G. O. Taylor Pure Rye Whiskies are the best on record, and are especially beneficial in prolonging human life, being well aged and pure. Physicians recommend them. No longer does the clash of arms resound throughout the land, or the smoke of battle-fields appear between you and your homes. The mighty roar of war's discordant sound has given way to the quick humdrum of every-day surroundings, and the stimulating strains of martial music now find echo only in the street band or in the soothing chords of an instrument at home. And so 'tis well. The right is doubly yours to enjoy the comforts of life, and the luxuries, if needs be, which Peace and Prosperity provide. The soldier's hearthstone should be as happy as the king's, and every wearer of the blue should be encouraged in beautifying and making comfortable the home which he has striven so nobly to defend.

These are our sentiments, known and expressed on more than one occasion, and again emphasized by the fact that if any reader of this advertisement, residing in New England, shall come to us for anything he may need in House Furnishings, we will give him Lower Prices and Easier Terms than any other house in New England, and will make a discount of on all purchases of Fifty Dollars or upwards, as well as giving them Low Prices and Liberal Terms of Credit. National President W. R. C.

EIGHTH NATIONAL CONVENTION WOMAN'S RELIEF CORPS.

The Eighth National Convention, W. R. C., will assemble in Boston August next, when delegates representing a membership of over ninety thousand will be in attendance from thirty States of the Union, and detached corps from States where there are no departments.

Arrangements for the week, as far as completed, are hereby announced:—

Members of the Committee on Information (designated by badges) will be at depots and prominent hotels on Monday and Tuesday, Aug. 11 and 12, to furnish strangers arriving in the city with information desired.

Through the courtesy of the National Encampment G. A. R. Committee, a grand stand will be erected in Copley Square for the members of the W. R. C., who will be admitted by ticket to view the procession, Tuesday morning, and on that evening the W. R. C. will unite with the G. A. R. in a reception at Mechanics' Building, Huntington Avenue. W. R. C. badge admit to this.

The sessions of the conventions will open in Tremont Temple (Tremont Street), Wednesday, Aug. 13, at ten o'clock A. M., when the delegates will be assigned to seats designated by the banners of their respective departments. All other members of the Order desiring to visit the convention and listen to its proceedings will be admitted to the galleries.

A lunch will be served the delegates, Wednesday and Thursday noon, in the Meionnon, Tremont Temple building.

The badge of the Order will admit members to the Grand Army Camp-fire, in Mechanics Hall, Wednesday evening.

The delegates will be the guests of the G. A. R. on Friday, Aug. 15, in an excursion to Plymouth. Collingwood Corps, in this historic town, is preparing to extend a hearty greeting to all members of the Order.

On Friday evening, a W. R. C. Camp-fire, open to the public, will be held in Tremont Temple, presided over by Mrs. E. Florence Baker, the first National President. Mrs. Nella Brown Pond will recite and Mrs. Mitchell will sing. Addresses will be made by his Excellency Gov. Brackett, Speaker Barrett, of the House of Representatives, Mrs. Annie Wittenmyer, National President, and Past National Presidents, W. R. C., Past Commanders-in-Chief, G. A. R., Corporal Tanner, and others. Mrs. Mary E. Knowles, Department President of Massachusetts, will read a poem written for the occasion by Mrs. Kate B. Sherwood, Past National President. An excellent programme of music will be presented.

An excursion to Nahant, complimentary to W. R. C. delegates and invited guests, has been arranged for Saturday, Aug. 16.

A committee has been appointed to escort visiting delegates to places of interest in Boston and vicinity, and all members of the Order who may visit Boston during Encampment week are assured of a hearty welcome.

Headquarters have been assigned as follows:—

National W. R. C. Headquarters, Hotel Vendome.

Department of Massachusetts, W. R. C., and Executive Committee, Hotel Vendome, Commonwealth Avenue.

New York, Hotel Brunswick, Boylston Street.

REMINISCENCES OF THE OLD NINETEENTH MASS. REGIMENT.

XXIV.

Feb. 8 was a day of thanksgiving. News was received that Gen. Winder was dead; he was commander of all the prisoners and largely responsible for our treatment. Before the war he was a citizen of Baltimore, and was selected for the position he held by Jeff Davis because no suffering could touch his heart.

The information was given us in this way: the prison was calm and still, when the voice of Lieut. David Garbett was heard. — "Hell has received re-enforcements: Winder is dead." A cheer went up from every man in the prison. If the guard knew the cause of our joy, they made no effort to stop it. Feb. 13 a meeting was held to organize the National Legion. It was proposed to have it take the form that was afterward adopted by the G. A. R., and I have always believed that the men who organized the Grand Army were some of them members of our prison association, as when I joined the order, in 1867, the grip was the same as our old Council of ten.

Tunnelling began in earnest and several were well under way. The plan of operation was to sink a shaft from four to five feet deep, then dig from that. The digging was done with a knife, spoon, or half of a canteen. Our squad began one from house No. 1. We were more fortunate than some, for we had secured a shovel cut it down with a railroad spike and sawed off the handle. With this we could lay on our bellies and work with both hands. The digger had a bag, usually made out of an old coat sleeve — and when he had filled it he pulled a string and it was withdrawn by comrades at the opening. They would empty it into their coat sleeves, and with their coats thrown over their shoulders, would walk about the prison, dropping the dirt wherever they could. Usually when we were digging a tunnel we dug holes in various places during the day, so that new dirt would not attract attention. We had to relieve the man inside often, as the air was so bad one could not remain over fifteen minutes.

We must dig fifty-six feet before we were outside of the wall. As we could only work nights, our progress was very slow. Fifty feet had been excavated, and it began to look as though we should be free again, but Feb. 14, the order came to move, and half the officers were taken out, marched to the depot, fooled around nearly all night in a drenching rain, and marched back to prison again as they had no cars to take us out of the city. We began work again in the tunnel, and continued all night and the next day, but before we could get it beyond the wall they moved us. We covered up three of the officers in the dirt at the mouth of the tunnel; but when the rebels were making their last round through the prison to see if all were out they discovered them.

We left Columbia, but no one knew where we were going. After a slow run of three hours the engine struck a cow; as the cow would not get off the track, the engine did, and we were delayed several hours. We didn't mind the delay. Having no destination, we might as well be in one place as another. After being two days on the cars, we arrived at Charlotte, N. C. It was quite evident that the rebels were near the last ditch. Our South Carolina guard would not go into North Carolina, and we had a new guard from the latter State. We left the cars and marched to camp, where an order was read, signed by Adjt.-Gen. Cooper, that a general exchange of prisoners would begin at once. Many did not take stock in the order, and escaped, but the guard did little or nothing to prevent them, and the next day the officers commanding in the city requested us to remain in camp, as they had a strong police guard in the city, and we might get into trouble.

We had some fun mixed with our misery. Our band had retained their instruments, and while they had not played at Camp Sorghum, for want of strings, with the money we received, they bought new ones, and our glee club was as good as ever. The citizens often came from the city to hear them sing. One day we had a rich treat. The adjutant of an Ohio regiment wrote a song called "Sherman's March to the Sea." Major Isitt and Lieut. Rockwell set it to music, and one night the glee club sang it from the steps of the hospital. The boys went wild over it, and even the rebels could not fail to appreciate it. We also organized the I. O. of M. E. (Independent Order of Mush Eaters), and met in house No. 9. It was not a charitable organization, as we had no charity for any one. Our meetings were opened by the prisoners forming a circle, one man in the centre with a stick. He must do something for the entertainment of the brothers, then give the stick to another, who must do the same, and so on, until all had done their part.

We brought out some fine talent, and were the liveliest crowd in prison. Often we would go out and catch some fellow who was despondent and nearly dead with the blues, bring him before the Grand Mogul and try him for some offence by court martial. While he would get mad, kick, and swear, it revived him, gave us lots of fun, and as we elected him a Mush Eater, it gave him a chance to enjoy the meetings. I remember one lieutenant of an Illinois regiment who had dug a hole in the ground and declared that he would not come out, but die there. One night he came out, was tried, and sentenced to be marched around the camp. The sentence was duly executed, the comb band playing the "Rogue's March." He began to improve after that, was regular in attendance upon meetings, and, I believe, was elected to the office of Deputy High Grand M. E.

We had one officer called "Pudding-head" Hayes, a captain in a Tennessee regiment, we undertook to capture him, but as he could whip any two of us, we let him alone. One afternoon at three o'clock the order was given to "fall in." It was an uncommon call at this hour, and "exchange" thoughts came to all. Soon the adjutant introduced us to a new commander. He was a Dutchman who had just come from the North, having been captured at Gettysburg, he said "Gentlemen, I come to take command of you. I have been in Fort Delaware fifteen months. You people teach me how to behave myself. I do for you all

I can. You treat me like gentlemen, I treat you like gentlemen. This place not fit for hogs. I sends in one hundred load of straw, right away, quick. Break ranks, march!" He then went through our quarters and swore worse than we could at our treatment. He then went to the hospital, had a row with the surgeon because he had done nothing to make us comfortable, and kicked up a row generally in our behalf. We felt that "the morning light was breaking" for us, and that we should now be made comfortable. The major came in the next day with more suggestions, but in a day or two we saw him no more. He was not the man the rebels wanted, as they were not anxious for our comfort, and his official head was removed by Gen. Winder as soon as he made requisition for the straw.

The 20th, two hundred of us left to be exchanged. We had quite a pleasant ride to Salisbury. Here I saw some of my men, the first I had seen since we left them at Macon, in July. I remember two: my first sergeant, James Smith, and private Jerry Kelly. I dare not undertake to describe their conditions; they were nearly starved to death; they could only walk by the aid of sticks. They told me of the other boys captured: that Lubin, a young recruit, had died three days after entering Andersonville, that Sergt. Geo. E. Morse and Levi Woodfinale, of Co. G, and many others, had died at Andersonville, Florence, and other prisons; for, like us, they had been carted from one place to another; but their faces brightened as they said, "not one of the boys went back on the old flag." From the first day I joined the 19th regiment I had been proud of it, but never did I see the time that I loved and respected those boys more than that day. More than thirty thousand were crowded into the pen at Andersonville. They had seen their comrades die at the rate of two hundred a day; they had been offered plenty of food and clothing, and no fighting, if they would renounce their allegiance to the old flag and join the Southern Confed-ederacy; but they said, "No! No! Death before dishonor!" and waited to join their comrades beneath the starry flag, if they lived to be free, if not, to join those who had been loyal and true in the camp on the other shore. We went from Charlotte to Goldsboro, where we arrived the next morning. Here we saw the worst sight that the eyes of mortal ever gazed upon. Two long trains of platform cars loaded with our men came in. They had been three days on the road, expecting to be exchanged at Wilmington, but, as the city was being bombarded, were turned back. As they unloaded them, not one in fifty was able to stand. Many were left dead on the cars, the guard rolling them off as they would logs of wood; most of them were nearly naked, and their feet and hands were frozen; they had lost their reason; they could not tell the State they came from, or their regiment, or company; we threw them what rations we had, and they would fight for them like dogs, rolling over each other eager to get the least morsel. I remember one poor fellow who had lost his teeth by poverty; he would pick up raw corn out of the dirt by the railroad track and try to eat it. We gave them every thing we had. I took my only shirt from my back and threw it to them; others did the same. The rebels allowed us to mingle with them, and with tears streaming down our cheeks, we did what we could. Lieut. McGinnis and I were looking for our men, when we found one named Thompson, of his company. He was a noble fellow, one of the largest men in the regiment; the only clothing he had on was part of a shirt; and that was covered with vermin; he had lost his sight and was almost gone; he died while we were with him. I took a little fellow in my arms and carried him across the street; he could not have been over sixteen years old, and did not weigh more than fifty pounds; he died just as I laid him down. They marched them to a camp, and the route was strewn with dead and dying; the citizens gathered around, and I saw or heard no expressions of sympathy. One of our officers said, "My time is out, but all I ask is a chance to once more take the field; I would try and get square." A rebel officer heard him, and said, "You are just the man I would like to meet." Our officer stepped out and said, "Here I am. I have been more than a year in prison, but I will whip you or any other rebel you can furnish." The rebel sneaked away, and said he would not disgrace himself by fighting a Yankee except in battle. We wished he had given our man a chance.

"The home where virtue dwells with love," says Ingersoll, "is like a lily with a heart of fire—the fairest flower in all this world." True as gospel. To make such a home more charming, there is need of a thorough taste and beauty in its appointment, and a further glance at the artistic advertisement of our friends, Messrs. Kilborn, Whitman & Co., as displayed upon page 14 of this number, demonstrates how easy that is, if, as they advise, we "come and see us."

THE NEW PENSION LAW.

Under the new law, approved June 27, 1890, every soldier and sailor, whether rich or poor, who is disabled from performing manual labor, every widow of a soldier or sailor, if she is dependent upon her labor for her support, and every dependent mother or father of a soldier or sailor who died of disease contracted in the service, can now obtain a pension. The soldier must have served ninety days.

NO PROOF THAT THE DISABILITY WAS CONTRACTED IN THE SERVICE IS REQUIRED. If the soldier is disabled NOW, he is entitled. Dependent parents need only prove that they are dependent NOW.

Write me at once for my pamphlet containing a full explanation of the new law, the rights still existing under the old law, and much valuable advice.

As pensions under the new law begin from date of filing of application, it is important that comrades should write me at once.

If a soldier has a pending claim on file, an application under the new law will not debar him from proving up his old claim and getting his arrears.

Those who are drawing pensions of less than $12.00, and who have additional disabilities not included in their certificates, can apply under the new bill. If, however, the diseases for which they are pensioned are progressive in their nature, I do not advise them to change. Write for advice. Write for my pamphlet. In F. C. and L.

THE DEPARTMENT OF CONNECTICUT.

This lively Department, under command of John C. Broatch, Department Commander, will turn out for the parade on Aug. 12, at the smallest estimate, 2,500 comrades. When it is remembered that this State is the smallest in area of any State in New England, with one exception, it will be apparent that Connecticut will send to Boston her full quota, and will not be excelled by any.

At a consultation just held in the parlors of Merriam Post, at Meriden, by the Department Commander and his full staff, the final details were discussed and arranged. The Headquarters at the Crawford House will be tastefully decorated both inside and out. On the first floor of the hotel will appear the National and State colors, the latter being loaned the Department by the State. Suspended across the street will appear a large flag bearing the inscription "Department of Commander." Visiting comrades will be welcome at the entrance on Hanover Street.

The Connecticut Division in the parade, will be formed by post number, with the exception that Admiral Foote Post 17, of New Haven, will take the department. This Post is the largest numerically in the Department, is fully uniformed, and will take at least four hundred men. One of the most noticeable features is the very handsome badge, designed and made by Hall & Breckenbridge, of Meriden. It is made of a new metal which if not gold is so near like it that it would be difficult to distinguish the difference. The badge is made in two parts. The upper one represents a monitor, cross cannon, shot, and rope edge, which is suspended over the flukes of an anchor forming a loop to which is attached the State coat of arms, suspended to which is the wooden gun, for which the State has become famous. The whole is attached to a nice blue ribbon, tattered in gold, at the bottom, National Encampment, Boston, Aug. 12, 1890. This Post will be headed by the famous Salem Cadet Band.

The right of the Division will be honored by Sedgwick Post, No. 1, of Norwich, Tubbs' Band, and will muster one hundred and fifty men, followed by Nathaniel Lyon Post 2, Hartford; Elias Howe, Jr., Post 3, Bridgeport; Merriam Post 8, of Meriden, one hundred and fifty men, distinguished by their white G. A. R. hats, each having the usual cord and wreath with corps badge on the side. This Post is commanded by A. W. Harvey, a sterling comrade and alive to all the duties devolving upon time.

The other large Posts present will be Robert O. Taylor, No. 50, of Hartford; Mansfield, No. 53, Middletown; Stanley, No. 11, New Britain; Moore, No. 18, Danbury; and many others not so strong numerically, but equally large in proportion. In all that form comradeship and that represents the pride of Connecticut.

STEWART'S FAMOUS BATTERY.

The list of the whole Union army, east and west, regular or volunteer, for aggregate casualties in battle during the four years, is headed by Battery B, Fourth United States Artillery, generally known as "Stewart's." This battery, with a total enrollment of 317 enlisted men and seven officers, had thirty-seven men killed or mortally wounded, and 121 wounded. In thirty-three battles, including one officer killed, one mortally wounded, and three wounded. This is 158 battle casualties out of 324 souls, or a trifle under fifty per cent. But it should be borne in mind that of this total of 317 thirty-eight were regulars, who were discharged in the spring of 1862, before the battery had been in battle. Subtracting these, leaves 286 men who did the fighting, and their loss appears to be nearly fifty-seven per cent. — National Tribune.

THE OLD SOUTH CHURCH.

One of the oldest and most widely known of Boston's ancient landmarks, stands on the corner of Washington and Milk Streets. We refer to the Old South Church, the third church structure to be erected in this city. It has a very interesting history, only a portion of which can be given in this brief sketch. It stands on what was the estate of Gov. John Winthrop.

A tablet placed in front gives the following information:—

OLD SOUTH.

CHURCH GATHERED, 1669.
FIRST HOUSE BUILT, 1670.
THIS HOUSE ERECTED, 1729.
DESECRATED BY BRITISH TROOPS, 1775-6.

The name Old South was given it to distinguish it from the building of the new South, in Summer Street, in 1717, which stood on the site of the present Shoe and Leather Exchange. When erected it was considered to be in the south part of the town; hence it was called the South Meeting-house. This building is rich in historical association. Here Lovell, Church, Warren, and Hancock delivered their orations on the anniversary of the Boston Massacre. In the old church Benjamin Franklin was baptized. In this the famous Tea Party meeting was held, it having been adjourned here from Faneuil Hall to accommodate the great crowd in attendance. At the left as one enters the auditorium is the platform, and above it hangs the sounding-board, above the platform is seen a window through which Warren clambered to deliver his address in March, 1775. At this time, it is estimated that seven thousand people crowded the church. The main entrance then was from Milk Street. Later the church was stripped of its inside furnishings, at the instance of Gen. John Burgoyne, whose regiment set up a riding school here, having covered the floor with a foot of gravel. The east gallery was reserved for spectators who desired to witness the feats of horsemanship, while refreshments were served in the first gallery. The Milk Street door was closed, and at the window east of it was placed a leaping-bar for the horses. When the American troops entered Boston, after the evacuation, Washington paid an early visit to the church, and, standing in the eastern gallery, looking

Work in silver since "Benvenuto Cellini" is said to be a new contrivance, nearly completed, for Queen Victoria's table, by Alfred Gilbert, A. R. S., who has been two years engaged upon it. About 2,000 ounces of silver have already been used. More valuable than silver or gold is good health; use, therefore, medicinal, the G. O. Taylor Old Bourbon and G. O. Taylor Pure Rye Whiskies. down on the wreck below, reverently said that it was "strange that the British, who so venerated their own churches, should thus have desecrated ours." The Old South Society is reported to be the wealthiest in Boston save one. Its parishioners once dwelt with sight of its steeple, but when the encroachments of business had driven them from the vicinity the society built the New South, now standing on Copley Square, the campanile of which forms one of the beautiful attractions of the neighborhood. After the great Boston fire, the building was used as a post-office by the United States Government.

Although there was much opposition to selling the old church, both inside and outside the society, the party in favor of selling prevailed, and it was advertised for sale as bricks and mortar, and knocked down to the highest bidder for thirteen hundred and fifty dollars. This was too much for the pride of historic Boston, and the indignation of the town broke forth at once. Possession for seven days was purchased, measures were taken to place the church in friendly hands, where it will remain until the public can redeem it. It is now fitted up as a historical museum, and, except its pews, is restored, as far as possible, to its original condition. The small fee of twenty-five cents admission is being used to wipe out the debt resting upon it. Patriotic people everywhere are urged to contribute to its redemption.

ANDERSONVILLE PRISON PURCHASED.

Capt. J. D. Crawford, commander of the Post at Macon, has purchased the famous old prison at Andersonville, and it is to be used as a national park and club-house by the members of that order. It was first intended to buy the land and to erect the stockade again. The grounds, as near as possible, were to have been put in the same condition as during the war, and an admission fee charged. This was considered an unwise step, and all the evils of such plans were brought to bear upon those interested, and the money-making scheme was abandoned. The stockade and all trace of the old prison will be removed. The land will be turned into a park and greatly beautified. A large club-house will be erected, and members of the G. A. R., now scattered over north and south, east and west, can gather there. Financially, the G. A. R. in Georgia is in good condition, and it is proposed to make the park second to none. The site is on the Southeastern railroad, and is a beautiful and picturesque place. When it was selected as a prison it was done under an official order, having reference to the following points: "A healthy locality, plenty of pure, good water, a running stream, and, if possible, shade trees, and in the immediate neighborhood of grist and saw mills."

Gen. Joseph E. Johnston, one of the surviving heroes of the Lost Cause, is 84, but as buoyant and as active as a man of 50. The whole Southern people feel a great pride in him.

The credit of originating the plan of having a census of the veterans taken belongs to Hon. A. S. Batcheller, of New Hampshire. He referred it to Col. John C. Linehan, who further incubated it and it was then submitted to the hands of Senator Chandler, who put it through.

OFFICE OF

CLOTHIERS,
667 and 609 Washington St., opp. Globe Theatre, Boston, Mass.

To the Members of the G. A. R. and the public in general:—

Would YOU, right now, during dog-day weather, when the primitive garments of Adam and Eve would suffice for comfort, buy an Overcoat, Ulster, Reefer, or Suit for Winter Wear, provided you could save from $5.00 to $10.00 on your purchase, and have it sent free of charge to any part of the United States?

We are aware that it is asking considerable to even request that you try on an Ulster heavy enough for zero weather, but you'll want it in a few months, and the dollars you'll save by buying now will equal the minutes you will spend in trying the garment on.

Our big show window will make you think of an old-fashioned winter. Better take a peek into it.

THOUSANDS OF WINTER SUITS

In every conceivable style that Fashion's laws permit.
ON many of them you'll save just a dollar for dollar paid.

WE inaugurate this Winter Sale now, in anticipation of the hundreds of thousands of strangers from all over this great and glorious land, who will throng our streets during the encampment of the G. A. R.

WE mean to make this Winter Sale in midsummer a profitable as well as pleasant memory to clothing buyers.

Every garment included in this sale will be marked on little price tags, and the prices will be five per cent above manufacturing cost.

This five per cent is added to actual cost to defray the express or mail expense of delivering the purchase to any part of the United States.

To get at the market value of these goods, you must add to our prices from thirty to fifty per cent.

Whatever you buy will pay you a cash dividend of thirty to fifty per cent. You'll find sizes for little boys and their big brothers, as well as for all sizes of men.

In our big south show-window we display clothing suitable for torrid, sweltering weather.

COPP'S HILL CEMETERY.

Not the least interesting place for strangers to visit in Boston is old Copp's Hill and the cemetery which crowns its summit. In the early history of the Colony a windmill was erected on it, and for some years it was known as Windmill Hill. It received its name from William Copp, who was at one time owner of the land. This is the second burial-place established within the old town of Boston. The cemetery encloses about three acres, made up of several lots; the first was conveyed to the town in 1659, the additions following many years later. Quaint inscriptions greet the observer on every hand; many of the older ones are illegible, by their more than two hundred years' exposure to the elements. On the Charter Street side, near the northeast corner of the cemetery, is a weeping willow which came from the grave of Napoleon, at St. Helena. From this cemetery the British bombarded the Americans on Bunker Hill, and set fire to Charlestown. The earthwork in which their guns stood was erected on the summit of the hill, near the southwest corner. It was a small affair of only a few barrels of earth. Three hundred and thirty-five pounds were found spiked within the works after the British evacuated. In the rear of the cemetery stood a small earthwork, designed for the infantry support. Vestiges of these works remained until 1807, when the summit was levelled. During the stay of the British in Boston, many acts of vandalism were committed by them in this ground. Some of the tombstones were made to serve as targets for the soldiers' practice; among them were those of Capt. Daniel Malcolm and Grace Berry. The names on some of the tombs were obliterated, and others inscribed in their stead. Here lie the remains of the Grays, of rope-making fame, Edmund Hart, builder of the "Constitution," the Mathers and Huguenot Signorines. From Copp's Hill, Generals Burgoyne and Clinton witnessed the fight on Bunker Hill, and directed the fire of the battery. The cemetery serves the North End population on Sundays as a place of promenade and recreation; men, women, and children swarming through it by the hundreds on that day. This was once the aristocratic portion of the town. Visitors will find no difficulty in reaching it, passing down Hanover Street to Salem, and from Salem into Hull Street, which bounds the cemetery on the south.

WASHINGTON'S HEADQUARTERS.

Perhaps the most noted house in New England, and indeed in the whole country, is that one which has had the enviable distinction of having sheltered in its day two of the most distinguished citizens this country has ever produced.—Washington and Longfellow. Take any Cambridge car at Bowdoin Square which traverses Brattle Street in the classical city across the Charles, and a short distance beyond Harvard Square, perhaps a quarter of a mile, you will be brought face to face with the subject of this sketch. This house was probably erected in 1769, by Col. John Vassall, a distinguished Tory. It is spacious and elegant throughout. From the entrance hall, the staircase winds to the upper floor. Not a sign of weakness or decay is apparent in the wood work. When the Colonial troops came to Cambridge in the spring of 1775, Col. John Glover's Marblehead regiment took possession of these premises, but afterwards Congress ordered the house cleared for a more illustrious tenant, and Washington himself took possession in July, as he himself records, under date of July 15. He selected the southeast chamber for his sleeping apartments, which remains to-day practically the same as it was during his occupation of it. The front room underneath the chamber, which is on the right as the visitor enters the door, was occupied by Washington as his study, and here he undoubtedly held council of war, surrounded by Generals Ward, Lee, Putnam, Thomas, Green, Heath, Sullivan, and Knox. Opposite the study, on the left to one entering the house, is the reception-room, in which Mrs. Washington received her guests. To this house Benjamin Franklin went on a commission with Thomas Lynch, of South Carolina, and Benjamin Harrison, of Virginia. Washington left the Vassall house for New York some time between the 4th and 10th of April, 1776. In 1789, during a visit to Boston, he called again at his old headquarters and stopped about an hour. While in Cambridge at that time, he received a military salute from the Middlesex militia, who had been drawn up on Cambridge Common, with Gen. Brooks in command. This house afterwards fell into the hands of Andrew Cragie, after whom Cragie Bridge was named. Cragie himself was at Bunker Hill. During his ownership, two very notable guests were entertained here by him: one of them was Tallyrand and the other the Duke of Kent. Here, Prof. Jared Sparks wrote the life of Washington. While in Cambridge as his landlady, Prof. Longfellow, at that time professor in Harvard College, took possession of the southeast chamber, which Washington had occupied. In this room were written "Hyperion" and "Voices of the Night," in fact nearly all his productions were penned in the old Vassall mansion. The house about which cluster such hallowed and inspiring associations does not exist in the country. It is at present occupied by the heirs of the distinguished poet.

COMMANDERS-IN-CHIEF OF THE GRAND ARMY.

To be at the head of this great Order has been the ambition of hosts of the prominent members, and at times feeling has run high at the national encampments between the adherents of the candidates. Those who have occupied the exalted position are:—

- Gen. S. A. Hurlburt, Illinois, 1866-67.
- Gen. John A. Logan, Illinois, 1868-70.
- Gen. Ambrose E. Burnside, Rhode Island, 1871-72.
- Gen. Charles Devens, Jr., Massachusetts, 1873-74.
- Gen. John F. Hartranft, Pennsylvania, 1875-76.
- Gen. John C. Robinson, New York, 1877-78.
- Chaplain William Earnshaw, Ohio, 1879.
- Gen. Louis Wagner, Pennsylvania, 1880.
- Major George S. Merrill, Massachusetts, 1881.
- Sergeant Paul Van Der Voost, Nebraska, 1882.
- Col. Robert B. Beath, Pennsylvania, 1883.
- Drummer Boy John S. Kountz, Ohio, 1884.
- Capt. Samuel S. Burdett, District of Columbia, 1885.
- Gen. Lucius Fairchild, Wisconsin, 1886.
- Major John P. Rea, Minnesota, 1887.
- Major William Warner, Missouri, 1888.
- Gen. Russell A. Alger, Michigan, 1889.

THE HANCOCK HOUSE.

Just west of the State House, on Beacon Street, stand two freestone residences. They occupy the site of one of the finest mansions built in Colonial times. Here stood the Hancock House, built by Thomas Hancock, 1737, given to his nephew, John Hancock, by his aunt, Lydia Hancock. The building was of stone, built in the most substantial manner. The walls were massive. A balcony projected over the front entrance. The tiled roof was surmounted by a balustrade. Dormer windows jutted from the roof. A wall of stone on which was placed a light wooden fence bordered the street. This was the house pillaged by the British, about the time of the battle of Lexington. Here Old Percy lived for a time, in the absence of the owner. This house also became headquarters of Gen. Clinton while he remained in Boston. Here Hancock entertained Com. D'Estaing in 1778, Lafayette in 1781, and Washington in 1789. A strong effort was made to save this splendid monument of Colonial days; but to no avail. In 1859, Gov. Banks proposed that the Commonwealth should purchase it; but the Legislature failed to adopt his suggestion. Some efforts were made by the city to secure the relics of the building itself, but it was finally pulled down, and so disappeared ingloriously a landmark which, if it stood to-day, neither State nor city would part with at any price.

GROWTH OF THE GRAND ARMY.

It was in Springfield, Ill., in March, 1866, that the Grand Army of the Republic was born, being fathered by Major B. F. Stephenson, surgeon of the Fourteenth Illinois Infantry, who, together with his tent-mate in the service, the Rev. William J. Rutledge, chaplain of the regiment, had talked together, on the march or in the bivouac, of the formation of an organization of veteran soldiers to perpetuate the memories of their service. They met by appointment at Springfield in the month mentioned, and prepared a ritual. Other meetings were subsequently held, and the plans elaborated, and on April 6, 1866, the first post of the Grand Army of the Republic was organized at Decatur, Ill., by Major Stephenson, assisted by Capt. John S. Phelps. The principles of the Order, as declared at that time, were that it was "organized to maintain in civil life those grand principles for which it stood in arms under the national flag; that it stands pledged to crush out active treason, to advance and support loyalty, to secure sound constitutional liberty to all men, and to vindicate everywhere and at all times the full and complete right of every loyal American citizen against all combination of force and fraud that may attempt to deny or deprive them of such rights."

A rapid increase followed. Post after post was formed, and State after State organized into departments, but in the Presidential campaign, politics nearly wrecked the Order, the idea getting abroad that none but Republicans should be members. When the contest was over, the membership rapidly declined until 1871, when at the National Encampment, in Boston, the following was added to the rules and regulations: "No officer or comrade of the Grand Army of the Republic shall in any manner use this organization for partisan purposes, and no discussion of partisan questions shall be permitted at any of its meetings; nor shall any nomination for political office be made."

The adoption of the above had the effect of stopping further disintegration, but it was not until 1878 that any decided increase was shown, the reports giving the membership for that year as 31,016, an increase of nearly 4,000 over the preceding year. The tide had turned in earnest, as these figures show: 1879, 44,752; 1880, 60,654; 1881, 87,718; 1882, 131,900; 1883, 215,441; 1884, 273,174; 1885, 364,787; 1886, 523,571; 1887, 555,008; 1888, 561,779; and on March 31, 1889, there were 6,711 posts, and 382,598 members in good standing.

THE WARREN HOUSE.

On Warren Street, in what was formerly Roxbury, stands a stone house, which occupies the site where Gen. Joseph Warren was born. The original mansion was in such a dilapidated condition that it became necessary to tear it down in 1846. The present house was built of the exact pattern of the old one, partly of the same materials. To reach this interesting spot take any Warren Street car, at the Tremont House, on Tremont Street.

GENERAL MARSTON'S PRESENTMENT, AND CHOICE FOR A MONUMENT.

"On last Memorial Day, at Exeter, as Gen. Gilman Marston was riding to the cemetery in the barouche with Capt. J. C. Dutch, Rev. C. M. Dinsmore, and myself, he seemed deeply moved as the band struck up the funeral march. The memories of the stirring past seemed to rush in upon him with overwhelming effect. After a struggle to suppress his emotions, the feeble old warrior remarked, 'This is the last time.' I replied, 'O no, General, you are good for ten years yet.' The General shook his head and added, 'No, I am so weak; I haven't got any strength; I can't do anything.' The conversation soon turned upon marking soldiers' graves. Said the General, 'I should prefer a granite boulder from the field, with polish of the surface enough for the name.' I remarked that Gen. Wilson had such a monument at Keene, and that it was an object of much interest to visitors."

The prediction of the grand old hero, who made his regiment, the "Fighting Second," so famous, has become a fact, much sooner than we hoped. That was his last Memorial Day on earth.

If it shall please his kindred to mark his honored grave with a specimen boulder of striking dimensions, I am sure his comrades in arms will, with great unanimity, respond, "So mote it be."—Correspondence of Exeter, N. H., News Letter.

AN EFFICIENT QUARTERMASTER.

Any one acquainted with the workings of a Grand Army Post knows that one of the most important and responsible positions is that of Quartermaster. Post 88, Allegheny City, and, by the way, one of the best Posts in the United States, is particularly fortunate in having a model officer, as the following incident will show.

One of the comrades of the Post swallowed a silver half dollar and it stuck in his throat. The doctor came in great haste, but couldn't move it either up or down, nor would he undertake to cut it out, for fear of cutting the comrade's jugular.

There it stuck. All efforts to remove it failed, and the comrade began to lose strength and flesh, until finally his friends concluded that he must die.

The chairman of the Relief Committee, being a very religious man, thought that it would never do to let so good a comrade die in his sins, and went to have a talk to him about death and the great hereafter. Sitting down by the bedside of the dying man, he said, "Bill, you are a very sick man." Bill assented with a nod. "Bill, you are sinking fast, and I fear you can't be with us much longer," said the good comrade. "Bill, don't you think I had better send for a minister?" Bill said "Yes" with great diffidence. "Well, Bill, have you any choice? Shall it be a Methodist, Baptist, or Presbyterian?" Bill said, "No, no, none of these; just send for our Quartermaster. If he can't coax this half dollar out of my throat, all the preachers in Africa and the United States can't budge it." The Post got the half dollar, and the comrade's life was saved.

SHAKE.

BRISTOL COUNTY, G. A. R.

The quarterly convention of the Bristol County G. A. R. Association was held yesterday in G. A. R. Hall at Mansfield, with Division Commander A. T. Wales, of Attleboro, in the chair. Ten posts were represented at the forenoon session, when the usual routine business was transacted. A dinner was served in the banquet hall at noon by the Woman's Relief Corps. In the afternoon a public meeting was held, with a good attendance. Remarks were made by Revs. Jacob Ide and Spencer Tunnell of Mansfield, Capt. S. H. Emery of Taunton, Comrades G. T. Fisher, Rufus Soule of New Bedford, C. S. Anthony and L. B. Hodges of Taunton, G. G. Smith and George A. Lackey of Easton, Cheever of Plainville, and George Randall of Hyde Park. There was singing by Miss Marie Hodges, and recitation by Mrs. P. M. Cobb. It was voted to hold the next convention at New Bedford.

"When your heart is bad, and your head is bad, and you are bad clean through, what is needed?" asked a Sunday-school teacher of her class. "I know: Ayer's Sarsaparilla," answered a little girl whose sick mother had recently been restored to health by that medicine.

Cause of Summer Complaints.

The direct cause of pain and looseness of the bowels is an irritation of the mucous membrane of the same sufficient to produce excessive peristaltic or worm-like motion in the interior of the bowels, by which means the matter in the bowels is naturally carried through them. This excessive irritation causes more than a natural peristaltic action, and the partially digested food matter is kept constantly passing along and evacuated freely. This is called a diarrhoea; where the irritation is enough to cause bleeding, we have dysentery. Indirect causes of diarrhoea, by which an irritation is started, are intestinal dyspepsia, overeating, unripe or overripe fruit, tainted meats or oysters, etc., torpor of liver, by which not enough bile is secreted, excessive flow of bile, etc. TREATMENT: Thoroughly evacuate the bowels with, say, Parson's Pills: they are among the best to get rid of all irritating matter. Then take Johnson's Anodyne Liniment in teaspoonful doses diluted with water every four hours, and often if the case is severe. In cases of Asiatic cholera, one teaspoonful should be given every half-hour. Thousands of people remember the year 1849, when that worst-known epidemic disease spread over this country. Johnson's Anodyne Liniment at that time was but little known outside of the State of Maine. Johnson's Anodyne Liniment is now in its full vigor, and they feel that with it at hand cholera cannot again devastate their fair city as in 1849. But for its use at that time by its friends, many would not now live to spread the joyful news that any case of diarrhoea, dysentery, cholera morbus, cholera, or kindred diseases, if taken in season, can be cured by Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. It never yet failed. No matter how well you know this medicine, it will pay you to send to I. S. Johnson & Co., Boston, Mass., for a pamphlet free, just to learn how to use the liniment economically. A teaspoonful properly used will often do more good than a half-bottle as some people use it.

THE CURIOUS

"Travelling Stones" of Australia, when looted within three feet of each other on a level, begin to travel toward each other and they meet, but at five feet remain motionless. This is certainly a very curious and rare phenomenon. The only case on record is that of the G. O. Taylor Ford and G. O. Taylor Ford live Whiskey, in cases used by sailors and soldiers. They are well aged and pure. Physicians recommend them. Our firm name is on the label and over the cork. CHESTER H. GRAVES & SONS, Sole Proprietors, Boston, Mass.

Houghton & Dutton.
53 DEPARTMENTS UNDER ONE MANAGEMENT.

Each department practically a store in itself, and the assortment in each complete. We carry nothing but goods made by the best manufacturers, and we guarantee everything to be exactly as stated, or money refunded.

In our basement will be found everything that the careful and economical housekeeper needs in the way of Kitchen Furnishings. We were the pioneers in low prices on this class of goods, and our prices today are the lowest. In our basement can also be found our Lamp Department with many novelties, our Wall Paper Department, Trunks, White China, and Horse Goods.

On our street floor are to be found Ladies' Hosiery, Kid, Silk, and Berlin Gloves, Laces, Gents' Furnishings, comprising the latest novelties, Gents' Hats, Umbrellas, Travelling Bags, Bags of all descriptions, Small Wares, Gents' and Ladies' Boots, Shoes, and Rubbers, Clocks.

FANEUIL HALL.

If there is another public building in the United States as well known as Faneuil Hall its name does not occur to us. Visitors will have no difficulty in finding their way to the famous landmark. They may have more difficulty in obtaining the salient points in its history; these we here subjoin in brief. In 1734 the old market-house, which existed in Dock Square, was torn down by a mob. In 1740 the question of its being built arising, Peter Faneuil, a public-spirited citizen, of Huguenot ancestry, offered to build one at his own expense, upon the town land in Dock Square, on certain conditions. His offer was finally accepted. The building was completed in 1742, and the towns voted that the hall be called Faneuil Hall forever. The original size of the building was forty by one hundred feet, just half the present width. Faneuil's original intention was to build it one story high, to accommodate the market only, but his generosity exceeded his original proposition, and he built a second story, for a town hall. In 1763 the interior was destroyed by fire. In 1806 the hall was enlarged in width to eighty feet, and another story added. This little circumstance robs the building in part of the veneration it might otherwise have. Many a pilgrim who inspects its exterior and interior supposes it to be in all respects the same Cradle of Liberty which was rocked with such vehemence by the patriots of 1775. As a matter of fact, however, but little is left of the original building as constructed by Faneuil during the siege of Boston. The British officers, under the patronage of Gen. Howe, fitted up the hall for a theatre, in which their performances consisted chiefly of pieces in which the patriots were held up for ridicule. To name all the dignitaries whose presence in this building has added to its distinction, or to mention in detail the many events which have occurred here, would prolong this sketch beyond the limits we have assigned it in this issue. Moreover, it is not necessary: they are a portion of the common history of our common country. During encampment week this landmark will be opened to the free inspection of all visitors to this section, save a few hours Wednesday the 18th.

FRANKLIN'S BIRTHPLACE.

The above cut represents the building which once stood on Milk Street, on the site now occupied by the Boston Post building. It was burnt Dec. 29, 1810. Here Benjamin Franklin is said to have been born, Jan. 6, 1706. The claim of this spot however to this distinction is disputed by the corner of Union and Hanover Streets, where Franklin certainly lived in early youth, his father having a shop on the Southeast corner of the above-named street.

The credit of originating the plan of having a census of the veterans taken belongs to Hon. A. S. Bacheller, of New Hampshire. He referred it to Col. John C. Linahan, who further incubated it and it was then submitted to the hands of Senator Chandler, who put it through.

Any officer or soldier who knew the late Col. George H. Woods, chief commissary of the Army of the Potomac, who was seriously injured during the late war, will confer a great favor by addressing his widow at Salem, Mass.

A private letter from Montreal, Can., states that Hancock Post 105, G. A. R., of that city has thirty members, with a prospect of rapid gains in the future. This Post is assigned to the Department of Vermont, and has for its commander a former member of Post 30, of Cambridgeport, Mass. A few of the comrades will visit Boston during the National Encampment.

LONGSTREET'S MEN.

They were Willing to Follow their Leader into the Jaws of Death.

Perhaps the best division in Lee's army, which had been known as A. P. Hill's Light Division, was knocked into "pi" by Grant's first onslaught. The writer for the first time realized there was truth in the report of one of Napoleon's marshals, when he said of the assault on the Pyramids: "He heard the balls of the enemy breaking the bones of his men like hallstones against window-panes."

It is unnecessary here to account for this misfortune; suffice it to say, this division was beaten and driven back on the plank road when the writer met Gen. Lee, who seemed quite as much disturbed as he was six days later when the gallant Gordon came to his relief. In this emergency Gen. Longstreet rode up at the head of his corps, just from Tennessee. After the usual military salutes Gen. Lee said in measured tones:—

"Gen. Longstreet, the firing is too heavy here to form your men. Take them beyond the crest of that hill (pointing to the rear) and form them at once for the attack."

I shall never forget Gen. Longstreet's reply. It was this:

"Gen. Lee, I can form my men in h—ll."

To which the old chieftain replied: "Proceed and attack the enemy."

Then followed that celebrated movement which has ever since made Longstreet famous as a tactician.—Atlanta Constitution.

GEN. W. S. HANCOCK'S REPORTS.

VI.

Report of Operations of the Second Army Corps, and other troops commanded by Major-General W. S. Hancock, in the Campaign of the Army of the Potomac, 1864.

The head of my column reached Cold Harbor at 6.30 A. M. June 2, but in such an exhausted condition that a little time was required to allow the men to collect, close up, and to cook their rations. (The attack ordered for this morning was postponed until 5 P. M.)

At 7.30 A. M. the corps was placed in position on left of Wright's Corps, Gibbon's division crossing the Mechanicsville road with Barlow on his left; Gen. Birney was left to aid Gen. Smith (Eighteenth Corps), in front of Moody's house. Brisk skirmishing ensued during and subsequent to the formation. Birney's division was sent to me at 2 P. M.

At 2.40 P. M. I received an order further postponing the assault till 4.30 A. M., June 3, and immediately gave the directions for the necessary examination and arrangements. The attack was to be made by Barlow's and Gibbon's divisions supported by Birney; Barlow formed in two deployed lines, the brigades of Miles and Brooke in the front line, and the other two brigades (Byrnes and McDougall) in the second line. Gibbon formed his division in two lines, the first deployed, consisting of Tyler's and Smyth's brigades, the second line of McKeen's and Owens's brigades in close column of regiments.

Barlow advanced at the line indicated and found the enemy strongly posted in a sunken road in front of his works, from which they were driven after a severe struggle and followed into their works under a heavy artillery and musketry fire.

Two or three hundred prisoners, one color and three pieces of artillery fell into our hands, the guns were turned upon the enemy, forcing them to retreat in confusion from that portion of the line; but this partial success of Barlow was speedily turned into a reverse by the failure of his second line to get up to the prompt support of the first, which was forced out of the captured works by the reinforced enemy, and an enfilading artillery fire brought to bear on it. The troops of the first line showed a persistency rarely seen, and taking advantage of a slight crest, held a position within from thirty to seventy-five yards of the enemy's line, covering themselves in an astonishingly short time by rifle pits. The gallant commander of the Fourth Brigade, Barlow's division, Col. (now Brevet Maj.-Gen.) Brooke, was severely wounded in the assault, and fell at the moment when his troops entered the enemy's works.

On the right Gibbon had been even less successful and had met with heavy losses; his attack was a little delayed, he reports, by the failure of Gen. Owens to have his troops formed, but the delay was brief. Gibbon's line was unfortunately cut in two by a marsh which widened as the line neared the enemy's works; the country over which he advanced was cut up by ravines; the line moved gallantly forward however, until close to the enemy's works, but was not able to advance further under the destructive fire. Gen. Tyler was wounded and taken from the field, and the lamented McKeen, after pushing his command as far as his example could urge it, was killed; the gallant Haskell succeeded to the command, but was carried from the field mortally wounded while making renewed efforts to carry the enemy's works.

On the left, and separated from his brigade by the swamp described above, Col. McMahon, with a part of his regiment, the 164th New York, reached the enemy's works, planting with his own hands his regimental colors on the parapet, where he fell covered with wounds and expired in the enemy's hands, losing his colors with honor.

A portion of Smyth's brigade also reached the enemy's works, but did not effect a lodgment, owing, Gen. Gibbon states, to the fact that Gen. Owen failed to bring his brigade promptly to the support as he had been directed, but deployed it on Smyth's left when he first became engaged.

A portion of Gibbon's troops held ground so close to the enemy that they could only be reached by means of covered ways.

Thus ended the assault at Cold Harbor. The major-general commanding was anxious that I should renew the attempt if practicable, but I did not consider it wise to make another assault, if the matter was left to my judgment.

The first report of casualties after the action, which was unusually short, hardly an hour in duration, showed a loss of three thousand and twenty-four (3,024); among officers the loss had been without precedent. I had to mourn the loss of those who had hitherto been foremost and most daring and brilliant in action.

Among the killed were Cols. McKeen, Haskell, and McMahon, already mentioned, three most promising young officers who had never failed to distinguish themselves in battle. Col. Byrnes of the 28th Massachusetts, Col. Porter, of the 8th New York, Col. Morris, of the 66th New York, all tried and excellent officers. To this list was added, unfortunately, on the following day, Col. L. O. Morris, 7th New York, killed in the trenches by a sharpshooter. When it is remembered that I had only my two smallest divisions actually engaged, it will be seen that my loss in commanders was unusually severe; it was a blow to the corps from which it did not soon recover.

Soon after the failure of the assault I was ordered to send Birney's division to support Gen. Warren, where it remained until the 5th. We occupied this position until the 11th, there being no material change except the extending of my line to the left as far as the Chickahominy.

Seige operations were conducted for several days, our lines being advanced by regular approaches and a mine commenced; but before any practical result was reached the seige operations were abandoned. The daily skirmishing was sharp and caused us some loss; the nights were characterized by heavy artillery firing and sometimes heavy musketry.

The bearing of the troops under my command on the march and during the operations on the Tolopotomy, and especially at the bloody battle of Cold Harbor, was distinguished for bravery and good conduct.

My subordinate commanders deserve high commendation for their faithful performance of duty.

My staff behaved with their usual zeal and gallantry. Capt. Alex. McCune, acting assistant provost marshal, Second Corps, a valuable officer, was mortally wounded on the evening of the 5th, by a shot from the enemy's battery.

The following is a partial list of the casualties occurring in the Second Corps during this epoch of the campaign:—

THE WASHINGTON ELM.

The venerable old tree stands in Garden Street, near Cambridge Common. Visitors to Boston have only to take any car in Bowdoin Square to Harvard Square, Cambridge, which is distant not more than two minutes' walk from this very interesting landmark. Many a pilgrim daily wends his way to the spot where Washington first took command of the American army, July 3, 1775. When the camp was here, Washington had a platform built among the branches of this tree where he was accustomed to sit and survey, with his glass, the country round.

KING'S CHAPEL.

At the corner of School and Washington streets stands King's Chapel, the fifth church built in Boston, the corner-stone of which was laid by Gov. Shirley, Aug. 11, 1749. The stone for the chapel came from Braintree, where it was taken from the surface of the ground, no quarries at that time being opened. This is not the first church built on this spot. The original was erected of wood, in the year 1688, and enlarged in 1710. In 1741 it was decided to tear down and rebuild of stone, the result of which was the present structure. The portico was not completed until 1789. In that year Gen. Washington was in Boston, and attended an entertainment given at this time for the purpose of raising funds to complete the portico. The General himself gave five guineas towards this object. The first bell used on the church was cracked while tolling for evening service, May 8, 1814. Paul Revere recast it. The organ now in use in the chapel was bought in England in 1756, for five hundred pounds sterling. It is said to have been selected by the immortal Handel himself. In the year 1775, during the siege of Boston, the British officers' military and naval, worshipped here. Some of the British soldiers who died during the occupation of the city are buried in the adjacent cemetery. After the evacuation of Boston, everything savoring of royalty was in such bad odor that the church was called Stone Chapel. In the reign of Queen Ann, it was called Queen's Chapel. Under or near this church was buried Isaac Johnson, the second white inhabitant of the town. The exact location of this grave is not known. This formed the nucleus of the burying-ground, in which the church stands, which is the oldest in the city. In the cemetery rests the dust of Gov. Winthrop, and of pastors John Cotton, Davenport, Oxenbridge, and Bridge, of the first church. Here, too, lie the remains of Gov. Shirley and Lady Andros. Under the chapel are vaults for the reception of the dead; each of these has been sealed for years. In one of these lies the wife of Gov. Shirley. After the British evacuated Boston, the old South Society—whose house had been converted into a riding-school by the enemy and rendered temporarily untenable—used the chapel about five years. King's Chapel was planned by Peter Harrison, of Newport, R. I. It was originally contemplated to have a steeple, but, owing to the want of funds, the steeple was never built. The building is of the most substantial character, and, with reasonable repairs, is likely to stand for centuries to come.

ON TO BOSTON NOT TO RICHMOND.

READ AT THE 155TH ENCAMPMENT OF ALEXANDER HAMILTON POST 182, DEP. N. Y., G. A. R.—June 6, 1890.

Say, Comrade, you who wore the Blue!
Comrade of Post One-eighty-two,— Commander Wood would speak with you.

He earnestly desires to know
If you in August next will go
To Boston with your Post and show

That by your presence you still hold
That "Comradeship" has not grown cold—
That you still flock within the fold.

Will you leave wife and children dear
For just one day in one whole year,
And on Old Boston's streets appear?

You'll see the boys of days gone by,—
Now slow of step bedimmed of eye,
But precious still in memory.

You'll meet men there in strong array
Who stood with you in battle's fray
And wiped out treason—slavery!

We'll meet to talk those battles o'er,
Commemorate those days once more,
Ere we depart for Lethian shore.

We'll bivaque there on Boston Green,
Absorb a plethora of beans,
And "drink again from same canteens."

And when of beans we've had our fill,
We'll "double-quick" to Bunker Hill,
Where Webster's words inspire men still.

From that proud summit "Glory" waves
Untrammelled o'er those patriots' graves,—
Where Toombs ne'er called his "roll of slaves."

From there we'll view the landscape o'er—
The lingering landmarks by the shore,
Where Britons weltered in their gore.

We'll scan the "old church belfry" near—
The shadowy form of Paul Revere,
Whose "signal bell" we still may hear.

In fancy, clouds of dust arise,
That mark the course his charger flies,
Toward Concord, 'neath the midnight skies.

His clarion voice wakes war's alarms;
It arouses all from sleep to arms
From towns and hamlets, tents and farms!

Then we'll go down from tower so tall,
Uncover heads by "Copp's" green wall—
Sends up "Lang Syne" from Faneuil Hall!

With shouts "Old Liberty" we'll rock;
We'll grasp old Massachusetts stock
In friendship firm as Plymouth Rock.

We'll kiss old Charlestown's daughters true,
Whose cheeks reflect such roseate hue—
We'll hug old "Salem's Witches" too!

We'll honor Boston's bounteous spread—
Conducive to long life, 'tis said—
"Root Beer" "Milk Shakes," and "Boston Bread"!

Can you, a Comrade, summon grace
To stay at home and show your face,
Or "loll" around some "watering-place"?

This may be your last "march," you
"know—
Your last reunion ere you go—
Death's "you" unconquerable foe!

When Boston's reveille shall sound,—
When columns form and flags go round,
No "rebel rag" will there be found!

None there will carry pot-house fame
By coupling "brave" with traitor's name!
Nor gloat exulting o'er their shame.

They "thought" 'twas "right,"—so treason wrought;
So Anarchists at Chicago "thought";
So Mormon Church has ever taught.

So error, foiled, excuse has sought;
So viciousness despise hath brought;
Still "rebel yell" availeth naught.

True bravery is of fealty born!
Some brutes will fight mid hopes forlorn;
And blatant perfidy deepens scorn!

Keep LOYALTY to FLAG in sight!
No sophistry can obscure their plight—
ONE Side Eternally Was Right!

Then march again with Men in Blue;
Let's follow Alger, good and true;
Let's work and vote for Clarkson, too!

Let's consecrate anew the sod
O'er which our ancestors once trod
With faith in Right,—with trust in God.

LOST HEADSTONES.

Can some of the readers of the RECORD tell where the remains of the following comrades lie? Ira Thompson, U. S. Navy, Thomas Maguire, Co. A, 1st Mass. Cav., Thomas Taylor, Co. E, 11th Mass. Inf. There has been boxed up and lying on the ground in rear of Post 7 lot at Mt. Hope Cemetery over a year, a headstone for each of the above deceased comrades. As the bodies are buried in some other cemetery, the officials of Mt. Hope cannot place the headstones where they belong. Trusting this article may be the means of marking the resting-place of our late comrades, I remain yours in F., C., and L., Louis A. Lauriat, 296 Columbia Street, Dorchester, Mass.

THE OLD NORTH CHURCH.

Who has not heard of the old North Church, immortalized in song and story, known also as Christ's Church? It is now the oldest church in Boston, standing on its original ground, having been erected in 1723, six years before the Old South. This church is best known as the one from whose steeple the signal lantern was hung, which gave warning of the enemy's march to Lexington and Concord. The old steeple was blown down in the great gale of 1804; the present steeple is sixteen feet shorter than the old one. Within is hung a chime of bells, placed there in 1744, the first chime ever used in Boston. Each bell has an inscription of its own of historical interest; the inscriptions run as follows:—

FIRST BELL. This peal of eight bells is a gift of a number of generous persons to Christ's Church, in Boston, N. E., Anno 1744, A. R.

SECOND BELL. This Church was founded in the year 1723. Timothy Cutler, D. D., the first Rector, A. R. 1723.

THIRD BELL. We are the first ring of bells cast for the British Empire in North America, A. R. 1744.

FOURTH BELL. God preserve the Church of England, 1744.

FIFTH BELL. William Shirley, Esq., Governor of the Massachusetts Bay, in New England Anno 1744.

SIXTH BELL. The subscription for these bells was begun by John Hancock and Robert Temple, church wardens, Anno 1743; completed by Robert Jenkins and John Gould, church wardens, Anno 1744.

SEVENTH BELL. Since generosity has opened our mouths, our tongues shall ring aloud its praise, 1774.

EIGHTH BELL. Abel Rudhall, of Gloucester, cast us all, Anno 1774.

This chime was obtained in England by Dr. Cutler, and was consecrated there. It is said that Gen. Gage witnessed from the steeple of this church the battle of Bunker Hill and the burning of Charlestown. In this church is the first monument ever erected to the memory of Washington. The interior has been somewhat altered; formerly there was a centre isle, which is now closed. The walls of the church are of great strength, being two and a half feet thick. Under the church are several vaults. When visited by the writer a few years ago, they were in a sad state of dilapidation, the doors of some of them being partly open, and the coffins in many cases gone to pieces with age and decay, exposing to view the skeletons of those who, in Colonial days, had been numbered in Boston's best society. Here Maj. Pitcairn's remains were interred; after the battle of Bunker Hill, later, the body was sent to England. During the siege of Boston, the English officers quartered in this part of the town attended Christ Church. This was the second Episcopal church erected in the town. The church is the possessor of a communion service and plate, presented by King George II., and bears the following inscription: "The gift of his Majesty King George the II. to Christ Church, in Boston, N. E., at the request of his Excellency, Governor Belcher, 1733." To visit this interesting relic of Colonial days, visitors will go down Hanover Street to Salem Street, down Salem to Hull, on the corner of which it stands. On application to the sexton, an inspection of the interior may be made.

PRIVATE DALZELL'S OPINION OF PENSIONING THE GENERALS' WIDOWS.

There is one delicate matter much talked of about our homely firesides, and in which all the soldiers' wives and children are deeply interested, that has never received the public attention and discussion which its importance demands, that I shall certainly bring to the notice of the Encampment at Boston as soon as I can properly claim the floor and a hearing for that purpose. It is this: no sooner does one of our generals, distinguished or otherwise, die, than congressmen scramble over their desks, heels over heads, in a break-neck race to see which shall be first to introduce a bill to pension the widow at from $3,000 to $5,000 a year. It is a burning shame and an insult to every one of our own wives. The three shots are fired over the graves of one thousand private soldiers and minor officers every month of every year, and these same enthusiastic congressmen have n't a word to say, nor a bill to introduce for their widows, who are just as good, quite the good of any general's widow! Not a word, not a bill. "O," they say, nonchalantly and with a yawn, "let 'em go: they were only privates, their widows only common women; $96 a year is enough for them!"

We shall see! I propose to test the feeling and judgment of the National Encampment on this wicked discrimination.

PRIVATE DALZELL.

UNION VETERAN'S UNION.

Purport and Object.

1st. To preserve and perpetuate the principles for which we contended on many battle fields.

2d. To secure recognition of the rights of the union soldier to positions of public trust and the preferment of our members over others for employment by the Government or by individuals, other things being equal.

3d. To demand of this Government a proper appreciation of our services and a just recognition of our claims.

4th. To support, aid and assist in the election to positions of public trust any and all true friends of the Union soldier, irrespective of politics, creed or party.

5th. To extend to our Comrades, their widows and orphans, in time of need, that charity which knows no end.

Eligibility.

At least six months' continuous service, (unless discharged on account of wounds) in the army, navy or marine corps of the United States, between April 12, 1861, and April 30, 1865, and an honorable discharge therefrom. Part of said service must have been at the front, on a line between where the United States Government exercised authority and territory held in dispute by the enemy; he must also be of good moral character.

Twelve names are necessary to organize a command. The Charter, Ritual, Cards, Rules and Regulations, will cost you $10. With these you have the whole machinery of a Command, and any man of ordinary intelligence will be able to conduct the ceremonies.

Address all letters to your department Commander, or, in unorganized States, to Wm. Clark, 409 Beckman Block, Cleveland, Ohio.

ORIGIN OF NAVAL POST 400.

In 1883, a handful of naval veterans, four in number, W. J. Ferguson, Wm. H. Bartram, William and John J. Mackie, met in Grand Army Headquarters in Philadelphia, Pa., and discussed the question of starting naval posts and naval associations in the United States.

At that time there was only one naval organization in existence, the Farragut Naval Veteran Association, of Philadelphia, Pa., which was composed of about a dozen members of Farragut's fleet, formed for the purpose of getting their prize money, due for the capture of New Orleans, and started in 1866.

We believed there was a wide field of work before us, waiting for the laborers who should go to work to reap the harvest.

On the 12th of December, 1883, Naval Post 400, Department of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, was granted its Charter. Wm. J. Ferguson, gunner U. S. N., was elected its first commander, Wm. H. Bartram, engineer U. S. N., quartermaster. John F. Mackie, sergeant U. S. Marine Corps, secretary.

Since that time, we have accomplished a grand work. All of the naval veteran organizations in the United States, twenty-five in number, have been organized under our direction and management.

We have formed four naval posts of the Grand Army, Post 516, New York; Post 104, New Jersey; Posts 405 and 400, Department Pennsylvania.

The Naval Veteran Legion, of Pennsylvania, was formed in our post room, December, 1889.

In 1885, we formed the National Naval Veteran Association, during a visit to Post 516, New York City.

We have expended over fifteen thousand dollars in charity and works relief and benefit to our naval veterans.

We have one of the finest post halls in the United States, valued at $5,000, fitted up and equipped like an old sloop of war,—sprinkler; its walls are lined with over a hundred valuable paintings and pictures of naval men and naval scenes from the earliest history of our country, and our work is done in pure naval style. We have over three hundred members, one of whom is Admiral David D. Porter, U. S. N.

Our post is crowded every night with our army and naval comrades, when we do our work. All of the ritual is illustrated by a costly sciotopion with naval views, in a navy fashion, and we are the headquarters for all the naval work in the United States. All of our comrades are invited to pay us a visit every Wednesday night, corner 8th and Vine Streets, Philadelphia.

on account of an inconsistency of law, as it was under the control of the War Department, and we belonged to the Navy Department. They refused to recognize us. We sent a committee to Washington and explained the defect: next year, all naval veterans were admitted and ever since.

We found the Grand Army ritual did not recognize sailors. We protested, and when the new ritual was arranged, the navy and sailors had an honored place.

At the last National Encampment, Milwaukee, we had a resolution passed allowing naval veterans to wear a small anchor attached to the G. A. R. Badge.

These are a few of the many ways in which Naval Post 400, of Pennsylvania, have benefited their shipmates in the United States, and this is only the beginning. We have other plans in view that will be of immense benefit to our naval veterans.

BUNKER HILL.

Visitors to Boston will find no difficulty in reaching this famous monument and battlefield. The battlefield of Prescott and Warren, of Putnam and Stark is too familiar to the American people to need describing here. Visitors will not fail, on coming to Boston, to go up into the monument and enjoy the magnificent prospect which the outlook presents to their gaze. There across the river is Copp's Hill, where Clinton and Burgoyne watched the progress of the fight, and directed the fire of the battery posted there. There looms conspicuously the tower and steeple of Christ Church, where it is said Gage stood and witnessed the battle. Below us flows the peaceful Charles, on whose bosom floated the British war vessels,—"Somerset," "Dauntless," and others,—which annoyed the Americans by their cannonading during the construction of the earthwork on the hill. Behind us is Bunker Hill proper, named after George Bunker, an early settler.

The view from the summit of the monument is well worth the effort made to obtain it. The monument stands in the middle of a space formerly enclosed by the redoubt. The corner-stone was laid in 1824, with the assistance of Lafayette. It was completed in 1842, and is 220 feet high.

GENERAL GRANT'S MEMBERSHIP IN THE GRAND ARMY.

Probably the most interesting event in the history of the Department of Pennsylvania was the mustering in of the great captain of the war, Gen. Ulysses S. Grant. Mr. Geo. W. Childs, in his "Recollections of Gen. Grant," gives the following history of the muster and the reception upon the General's return from abroad:—

"Gen. Grant was made a member of the Grand Army of the Republic in my private office, in the Ledger building, on the morning of May 18, 1877. On his consenting to join Gen. George G. Meade Post, No. 1, of Philadelphia, arrangements were made for the usual muster in the post room, but in preparing for his proposed tour around the world, Gen. Grant was delayed in reaching the city, and then English statistician, Mr. Greville Walpole, of London, estimates that the earth weighs 5,574,000,000,000,000 tons—a tremendous heavy body. Our own bodies often feel terribly heavy from overwork or illness. In such cases, try judicious doses of G. O. Taylor's Pure Lysa Whiskey. No beverages in the world surpass them in flavor and purity. Physicians recommend them. Druggists and Grocers sell them. Our firm name is on the label and over the cork. CHESTER H. GRAVES & SONS, Sole Proprietors, Boston, Mass.

the engagements made for his entertainment, both public and private, occupied every moment of his time. It became necessary to change the plans, and Col. Beath, then Adjutant-General of the Grand Army of the Republic, and Samuel Worthington, Adjutant of Post 1, called on me to fix the hour that would best suit Gen. Grant for the Grand Army service.

"Accordingly, at the time fixed, the officers and members of Meade Post met in my office, and there Gen. Grant assumed the obligations of the order, and received the badge of membership, which he wore frequently during his tour abroad, and at home on public occasions.

"At noon of the same day, a public reception was held in Independence Hall, and thousands of veterans, with other citizens, shook hands with Gen. Grant, bade him good-by, and wished him a prosperous voyage.

"Upon his return from this remarkable tour, Philadelphia, of course, welcomed him with unstinted liberality.

"The evening of Dec. 12, 1879, was devoted to the Grand Army of the Republic, the Academy of Music being packed with an audience of over 5,000 enthusiastic veterans. Only a few personal friends could be admitted on that occasion, Bishop Simpson, A. J. Drexel, George H. Stuart, and myself being of the number.

"The escort of Gen. Grant from the Continental Hotel to the Academy of Music was probably one of the most thrilling and touching scenes ever witnessed in Philadelphia. A guard composed of members of Post 1 and representatives from all the city posts acted as escort, and grouped around Gen. Grant's carriage were a large number of color-bearers carrying tattered and battle-stained flags. Fireworks blazed at every point along the route. The streets were densely packed with an enthusiastic throng, and altogether the scene was one never to be forgotten by those who witnessed it.

"Gen. Hartranft, Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, presided at the meeting, and Gov. Henry M. Hoyt made an eloquent address of welcome.

"Gen. Grant's reply was made in a clear and distinct tone, that was plainly heard all over the building, and was listened to with the closest attention."

Private Dalzell is heading for Boston in his own peculiar way. He is an enthusiast for the per diem Service Pension Bill. He claims to be the author of it away back in 1869. However that may be, he is making a series of speeches across the country in its favor, as he comes to Boston as one of the regularly elected Ohio delegates. He makes no charge and speaks in the open air. His first meeting was at Cambridge, Ohio, Tuesday, 22d ult., and his next at Monetta, Ohio, 24th. From there he goes to Elizabeth, W. Va., and across the mountains to Cumberland, Md., and east, addressing the boys on his favorite theme, the Service Pension Bill. By the time he reaches Boston, the day before the parade, he will have an opportunity to know from a direct personal contact with them what the soldiers demand, and the National Encampment will hear the story from the private's lips.

On July 21, there were one hundred and fifty-five men in the Soldiers' Home at Chelsea, Mass. This is the largest number that has ever been in the Home at one time, and still there are applications for admission being received by the secretary almost daily. In the past the applications during the summer months were very few.

POST 101'S TWENTY-FIRST BIRTHDAY.

Charles Sumner Post 101, G. A. R., Groveland, celebrated its twenty-first birthday on Wednesday, June 16, by a picnic at Balch's Grove. Delegates were present from Post 47, Haverhill; Post 108, Georgetown; and Post 151, West Newbury. Among the invited guests were Department Commander Geo. H. Innis, Judge Advocate W. R. Rowell, Chief Muster Officer John M. Deane, and Charles S. Anthony, of the Council of Administration, with Past Commanders, J. G. B. Adams and Geo. S. Evans. The Woman's Relief Corps was represented by its Department President, Mrs. Mary E. Knowles, Department Treasurer, Mrs. Harriette L. Reed, and Past Department President, Mrs. Emma B. Lowd, with delegates from the Corps at Haverhill and other places.

The beautiful grounds were handsomely decorated and presented a most striking and effective appearance. The large party enjoyed itself in various ways during the forenoon, and at 2 o'clock the invited guests were seated at long tables under the trees, facing the beautiful Merrimac River, where a bountiful collation was served by Charles Sumner W. R. C. No. 87, the tables being very prettily decorated with flowers, flags, etc. After the collation an interesting program of exercises was opened with singing by the Alpine Quartette of Haverhill. Post Commander I. C. Day tendered a cordial greeting to the Department officers of the G. A. R. and W. R. C. and to the visiting Posts and Corps, as well as to all friends who had gathered to celebrate the freedom's birthday of Post 101.

He then introduced the Senior Past Post Commander, Major N. E. Ladd, who gave a history of the Post and its work during the past twenty-one years. It was a very interesting review of the history of the Post, and was listened to with close attention by the members of the Post.

Addresses were then made by Department Commander Innis, Past Department Commanders Evans and Adams, Commander Frost, of Post 47, Commander Martin, of Post 108, and Commander Lay, of Post 151, G. A. R., Rev. Bernard Copping, of Groveland, and Mrs. Knowles, Mrs. Lowd, and Mrs. Reed, of the W. R. C. Mrs. Knowles also entertained the company with some very delightful recitations.

Groveland being the birthplace of Capt. J. G. B. Adams, and he having gone to the war from that town, the welcome accorded to him was of the most cordial nature, the people vying with each other in telling good stories of John Adams when he was a boy. Capt. Adams spoke very affectingly of the "boys" who had gone with him from that town to the war, and of the scenes with his mother when leaving home, and again after his return, when he was going back to the front, after having been badly wounded and in prison for ten months. The Captain may well feel proud of the high esteem in which he is held by those who know him best, and among whom he spent the early years of his life.

Altogether, the anniversary was a complete success, the day being beautiful and everything connected with the exercises of a pleasant nature, and the members of Post 101 are to be warmly congratulated upon the handsome way in which they celebrated their freedom's birthday. Long may the Post prosper!

NAVAL POST 400.

This Post of jolly Jack tars will leave Philadelphia on Saturday, Aug. 9, for Boston, by way of New York. They will be received at New York City by Naval Post 516, and Naval Post 104, New Jersey, Farragut Association of New York, and invited to a grand banquet and campfire. On Sunday, they will be taken all over the city, and leave Sunday night by the Stonington steamer for Boston, in company with the above associations, and Naval Veteran Legion, of Philadelphia. On the steamer we will hold a religious campfire, and will arrive in Boston, Monday morning, Aug. 11, about 10 A. M., and become the guests of the Kearsarge Naval Veterans of Boston, who will provide a grand breakfast for us and our friends. Our headquarters will be at Hotel Herbert, Boston. The number of veterans who will participate in the parade we do not exactly know, but we think about one hundred men.

Now don't you think we are entitled to a small corner in the reports of Naval Veterans in the GRAND ARMY RECORD? For the verification of what I have written, I refer you to Commander of Kearsarge Naval Veteran Association of Boston, John F. Mackie, Adjutant.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

SOLID SHOT FROM HANNAH DUSTIN.

The annual reunion of the New Hampshire Veteran Association, which is usually the event of the year in New England, although eclipsed this year by the National Encampment, will come off as usual, and so firmly has it taken hold of the people, that no fears are entertained but that the attendance will be up to the average, providing the weather is favorable.

Nearly all of the regimental associations are now provided with commodious headquarters, and many of them are already occupied by the families of comrades, who are themselves too busy to accompany them. The Association of Veterans, composed of comrades who served in either State or National organizations, or in the navy, but who now reside in New Hampshire, have begun work on their building, which will be completed before the reunion, and will be one of the handsomest on the grounds.

A competent committee on amusements, headed by Col. C. G. Haggood, will provide the usual attractions, due notice of which will be given. On camp-fires, Comrades John C. Linehan, C. G. Haggood, F. H. Buffum, J. H. French, and M. M. Collis will see that none but the soundest and best-seasoned material will be furnished for the evening entertainment. The grounds, which are really the most enjoyable features of the reunion, being instructive, amusing, and entertaining. The music will be in charge of Comrade J. H. French. The old War Veterans' Drum Corps, of Manchester, will be on hand, and the well-known reville, taps, and retreat will again awaken reminiscences of bygone days. Daniel Bean will be camp bugler. The Highland Band, of Lake Village, one of the best in New England, will furnish the martial and concert music, and a quartet has been secured to lend off in singing the grand and inspiring songs which often gave new life to the tired and haggard souls "away down South in Dixie." Gen. Ben. Butler has faithfully promised to be present, if alive, and greet the sons of his native State. It is expected that Past Commander-in-Chief William Warner will deliver the address. Gen. Sherman, Gen. Alger, and many other celebrities of the National Encampment will undoubtedly visit the Weirs.

Capt. Oliver Eldridge, who had command of the steamer "Atlantic" during the expedition to Fort Royal, in 1861, will be the guest of the Veterans of the Third Regiment Association, who were on the vessel at the time mentioned. Burnside, Hooker, McClellan, Sheridan, and many others of lesser fame, who have honored the reunions by their presence, are gone, but their memories are held in grateful remembrance. To those of the comrades from the West who remain over and take their vacation in New England, a warm welcome will be assured, and it is earnestly hoped that all who can, will avail themselves of the privilege of seeing the nearest little grove in the country, and the greatest attractions to be found at reunions in general.

Capt. J. G. B. Adams spent a few days in Penacook in July. He was accompanied by his estimable wife. He found here a hermit, named Linehan, a Russian from the farthest confines of Kerry, and from him acquired a great deal of information about that great country and its inhabitants. He said the stories told by Kennan in relation to his countrymen are false, that the only difference now between the average Kerryman and the rest of mankind is that the former uses whiskey instead of milk in his tea, which Adams thought was a strong trait of barbarism viewed from an American standpoint, where they take their milk straight. He also called upon one of the most noted members of the Woman's Relief Corps in this part of the country, Hannah Dustin, formerly of Haverhill, Mass. She came here originally as a missionary among the Indians, and taught them first the folly of wearing hair, which necessitated the use of combs and such heathen abominations. She became a power in New Hampshire, and her name is a household word in the old Granite State. For her eminent services among the red men she was appointed keeper of the lighthouse, which is located on an island in Penacook, formed by the junction of the Merrimack and Contoocook rivers, which bears her name, and here, in her green old age she stands on a "bust" as a monument to the heroism of our many grandmothers. As an appreciation of her services, the Government made the appointment a permanent one, which was very fortunate, as it was rumored that the Congressional delegation was to make a change, on the ground that the young women ought to have a chance. The fact that they did not teach the Indians how to dress their hair was not so much their fault as that of their parents, therefore, not being to blame, it was only the proper thing to place them on a "bust" too, but on finding that the removal conflicted with the civil-service rules, and that the salary was non-assessable for political purposes, they let up on the old lady, and she is now mistress of the situation. Capt. Adams had a very pleasant interview with her, securing many items of interest concerning the old French and Indian wars, which he will insert in an address he is preparing to inflict on the unfortunate inmates of the Soldiers' Home at Chelsea. Among other things, he found that the Colonial government paid one hundred pounds bounty for scalps ($600 a good price for hair, which is allowed to our troops during the civil war, would have deprived every reb of his scalp, and make the people of South look like heathen philosophers. He placed every man on the pension list who served thirty days against the enemy, without requiring him to prove a disability.

She said there were no mugwumps in those days, as all men had to work for a living; constant exercise keeping the blood in active circulation, and preventing the accumulation of bile, which, in her opinion, was the cause of this un-American and un-American growth. In the body politic, consequently no fault was found with the Government for being liberal to the men who risked their lives to save those who remained at home in safety. Not only were liberal bounties paid, and extensive grants of land made to the defenders of the Colonists, but almost all the public positions of honor and profit were given them in time of peace. Thus Col. Andrew McMillan, who was one of the bravest Indian fighters in Penacook, was for years a leading citizen, and in his old age removed to an immense tract of land in North Conway given him by the Government for his services; again, the soldiers from Newbury, Mass., who took part in the reduction of Louisbourg, Cape Breton, were granted an extensive tract of land in what is now the town of Boscowen, naming the settlement in honor of their commander, Admiral Lord Boscowen. These were but a few of the illustrations that could be given of the manner in which New Hampshire honored her soldiers. John Sullivan, the valiant defender of the liberties of the Colonists, was thus honored, and all others who helped to establish the Republic. No aristocratic monied class then existed, consequently there was no howling against the Government for fulfilling the promises made to its defenders. In those days there were no fat offices in the State or nation, to be given to men who held high rank in the army, men who, with a salary of five thousand dollars a year, in the Senate, the House, on the bench, or in the diplomatic service, lectured the unfortunate comrades who fought in the ranks for presuming to ask a pittance, for what they had done for the Republic. In her day all were treated alike. Officers and privates stood on the same footing, as far as rewards were concerned. There were then no foreign importers or native Anglo-manics, Mugwump Republicans, or Copperhead Democrats, who would dare to tell the men who fought with Wolfe at Quebec or marched to Bunker Hill with Stark that they were mercenaries, camp-followers, and bums, because they asked the Government to deal squarely with them. No, indeed; if they did, they would be treated as their prototypes, the Tories were treated. No, Bishop Potter could stand up in those days, and villify the men whose bravery and sacrifices made it possible for him to take a trip to Europe in this year of our Lord eighteen hundred and ninety. If such a prelate existed then, which the wisdom of our fathers prevented, he would be singing 'God Save the King,' and denouncing the brutal and tyrannical rebel, George Washington. No, indeed; 'we had wild Indians, bears and wolves, skunks and Tories to contend with,' he said. 'But thank God! the Mugwumps and Copperheads were put off a century later. If we had had to face them too, I am afraid that I would not be on a bust here to-day, the rocky shores of the Contoocook would be without a lighthouse, and Bishop Potter would be an obscure curate in an English town.'

"Of course I am too old now to take part in these discussions, but it does make my blood boil to hear and read what men say of you veterans on pleasant Sunday evenings. Men come and sit under the shade of that elm tree, and read The People and Patriot, the Manchester Union and the Boston Herald. They think I am deaf; but I hear every word, and when I listen, and find that these papers say it is a disgrace for the true soldier to have the world believe that he enlisted for the sake of bounty or pension I burn to ask them why they don't ask the men who lent money to the Government to abate the interest, why should all the glory be given the soldier and all the profit paid the bond-holder. When you enlisted you never thought of pay; the miserable pittance of eleven or thirteen dollars a month to stand up and be shot at was a poor substitute for the liberal wages or the good salaries many of you received. When you were called upon, you gave no thought to money, home, wife, mother, or sweetheart, you left all, not even thinking of that honor which the Mugwump or aristocratic veteran want you to accept as payment in full for your services, and went out, donned your uniform, shouldered your musket, and saved the Republic. Now, how did the other class behave, the men who had the money? Did they think of honor? and were they content with it for the use of the money? Not at all; the Government had to sell its bonds below par, at an advanced rate of interest, and Shylock never adhered closer to the terms of his contract than did our money lenders oblige the Government to adhere to its obligation to them. Did they ever abate one cent of interest? Was there one bond ever offered for redemption before it became due? Has not the Government, in getting rid of the surplus, been obliged to go into the market and pay a premium on its own bonds, in order to redeem them? Of course it has. You boys went to the front in 1861 to 1865, the Government hired this money to feed, clothe and pay you your miserable monthly wages; an enormous debt was created during these four years. When you who survived came back, like honest men, you threw aside your uniforms, exchanged your muskets for the implements of civil life, and no class has done more to pay that debt and accumulate that surplus than you have. Now, if any one doubts this, just ask them the next time they take an excursion through the country to try and observe during their travels in all stations of life, from the man who is digging in the sewer, up to Benjamin Harrison in the White House, the number of men wearing the little bronze button of the Grand Army of the Republic; and this is a quarter of a century after the war closed, and a host of the same men, led by Grant and Sheridan, Thomas and McClellan, Logan and McPherson, and McClellan and Meade, have marched through the portals of the gates to the great unknown. Oh, it makes me shiver to hear these men read this horrid stuff about your want of patriotism, while they are drawing interest, and have been for years, on money they deem more precious than your blood, and while deploring what they call your want of honor, never dreaming that a more mercenary, sordid band of usurers never existed than the United States bond-holders. Their patriotism had a metallic ring, a tink of gold; while the soldiers, who had to be content with the depreciated offspring of the rag-picker, the greenback. But, boys, take the advice of an older veteran than you, for I have been a witness of all the wars on this continent. I am the original founder of the relief corps for long before Mrs. Baker, Mrs. Turner, Mrs. Fuller, or any of those bright women, had learned to fix up their back hair. I had relieved many an Indian of his topknot. Stand by one another, and the good people of the country will stand by you. Vox Populi, Vox Dei, is as true now as ever; you saved the nation, and the Republic will not neglect you; only be true to yourselves, and you can balk the raving of the Mugwump and the hissing of the Copperhead."

The interview with Mrs. Dustin proved very satisfactory to Capt. Adams. The old lady, regardless of her great age, looked robust, and, the day being warm, she was dressed very much like the statue of the New York Lady, in the play of the "The Old Homestead." She was clad simply in her robe de nuit, which was all the sculptor would allow, the war tariff of the Republicans making cloth so high that no more could be afforded. A handful of scalp, however, removed the appearance of scantiness in dress, and, armed with a tomahawk, she would have made hard work for a Mugwump or an Episcopal bishop. The boys of the home have a treat in store for them when Jack gets back, as he is loaded to the muzzle. CANTERN.

Funny, isn't it? Many a veteran comes to this office anxious to have something inserted in the paper, but he does n't subscribe: he horrors.

A MILITARY WIFE.

I was an officer, a most Redoubtable commander, But met a pretty girl, and was Unable to withstand her. And so I joined her company; And oh, how often changes A soldier when a single life For married he exchanges!

That girl—she's always in for war, Looks daggers over trifles, And when I'm fast asleep at night My pocket-book she rifles. At military balls she lets Young officers resolver, And yet so fascinate-ting is That even I absolve her.

When I objected to the cost In tones that made me shako She said that she would haversack— A sealskin, instant make-o. And now (of course she'll have her way; Whole armies could n't block it!) She's put me over infantry And says that I must rocket.

THE OLD STATE HOUSE IN 1870.

The first town house in Boston was erected of wood, between 1657-59, at the head of State Street, on ground which was used as the first market-place of the town. This building was burnt in 1711. Another building, built of brick, took its place in 1712. It was burnt in 1747, together with many valuable records and papers. In 1748 the town house was rebuilt. This we know to-day as the Old State House. It has had a varied experience. In 1830 it was occupied by the City Government as a City Hall, in which met the convention to ratify the Constitution of the United States. Under its shadow the Boston Massacre was enacted. In it was held the Colonial Courts. It has been used also as a barracks for troops, and in the Civil War a recruiting office was opened in the second story, and many men enlisted for the Union army. The eastern chamber was originally occupied by the Council, and afterwards by the Senate; the Representatives occupied the west chamber. Here, according to John Adams, "Independence was born." Here Gage, Howe, and Clinton held councils of war before Bunker Hill. In the council chamber Gov. Hancock received Count D'Estaing on his entry into Boston, in 1778. In 1789, Washington occupied a temporary balcony built at the west end, where he received the acclamation of the people. After the Revolution, it became the meeting-place of the Legislature. In January, 1798, the Legislature vacated the building and took possession of the new State House. Through the enterprise and public spirit of the Boston Society, the building has been recently restored, in side and out, to its original condition.

A RELIC OF THE CIVIL WAR.

There is a little steamboat on Green River, running between Livermore and Calhoun, that is little more than an exaggerated canoe, supplied with boiler, engine, and a paddle-wheel. It is the Alpha, and it is engineered by a man who has had a great deal to do with the filling in of history, the outlining of the future by others, his superiors in position, but not necessarily in ability. He was the First Assistant Secretary of War of the Confederate States of America. After this he was chief military engineer of railroads under the Confederate government, a position that required a high degree of ability, infinitude of resources, and an almost incredible degree of determination and perseverance. Under his direction things were accomplished in the way of building, repairing, and operating railroads that made the Northern engineers stare with wonder when they considered the nature and quantity of the material with which the work was done and the conditions under which it was accomplished. After the war Mr. Miner made a great deal of money in Southern railroads, but he went to California and lost his entire fortune. He is now more than seventy years old, and is at work on the little boat trying to eke out a livelihood by hard and honest toil.—Oceansboro (Ky.) Messenger.
